To Mr. Canevari

Date June 14, 1974

From April Lynn Williams

Subject Faculty Evaluation Poll to let you know where we are on it.

1. The original letter was sent to all faculty, mainly to get release for comment.
2. Talked to Dr. Dougan about FEP.
3. A second note was sent Friday, June 7 to faculty who had not responded yet.
4. June 7, faculty members were contacted by telephone and asked to return releases immediately.
5. To date ten faculty members with comments have not returned releases.
6. Attached is a letter sent to faculty who had only a read-out. David feels we should also have releases from them.
7. To date forty-six faculty members have not returned those forms. S.a.O.

8. I have talked to several faculty members about the poll. Many are upset about the method in which it was conducted, some just confused as to how to read it.
9. Out of 105 faculty members only a total of 44 have given us releases. And 5 refused to print comments.
10. Also attached is a duplicate copy of some of the faculty comments for your information.

Attached is a copy of the computer read-out of the scores from the Faculty Evaluation Poll taken in your classes. In the near future these results will be published in a faculty evaluation booklet. If you have any questions about these results please contact the Student Activities Office.

In addition, you will find attached some comments which have been taken from the responses of students attending your classes. We would like to publish these comments along with the statistical results of the poll. If we have your permission would you please sign the statement below and return it to Mr. Canevari's mailbox by May 31, 1974?

Sincerely,

The "Total Instructor Mean" is really invalid and shouldn't be listed. Donna Courtney Chairperson Even I can see that!

Encl. Might there be other misleading statistics.... Frankly I don't understand what the last three columns are supposed to indicate.

I hereby give my permission for the attached comments to be published in the Faculty Evaluation Poll.

INSTRUCTOR Askim

Drop by sometime + see me — or let's get together for a long talk — you just don't understand some things
This is not meant to be a threat but a statement of the space we are in —
I appreciate your change in C.B. wording. The effect of this student evaluation would have been (and still could be)
about the same as "academic rape".

Dona

I am very sensitive to student needs and criticisms. Many improvements have been made over the last four years (Bios) in spite of intradepartmental hassles, budget slashes
by the administration, transportation hassles, and the graphic arts spaces.

due to
cutting support
(C.B. & ...)

I can understand your desire to improve instruction and I am in favor of that completely. But you do not and apparently will not attempt to understand individual INSTRUCTOR problems with full perspective.
We are not all sitting on self styled ivory thrones
looking down on "second class citizens".

If students are ^{coming into} beamed in my classes when they first arrive just waiting for a slip, I will not be able to function at ease. For me personally, I will become tense and my lectures will appear disorganized and the bad effects will be compounded. If I have to face this sort of thing, then I will let the student be damned. Think about what you are losing.

Gene Caneveri

Donna Courtney

Don't print this but perhaps from my point of view

The reading of the original printout "should" be:
(if students knew the "backstage drama")

BIO 5 CHUCK BROWN

Conflicting philosophies between instructors in the Life Science department combined with budget slashing by the administration prevented Chuck Brown from providing the students with the equipment and well organized labs ^{the} students deserved. The sudden clamp-down on graphic arts by the college president and business manager plus difficulties in obtaining ~~the~~ proper transportation ^(on date needed) reflected incompetency on the part of administrators, and compounded the problems of instruction in Biology 5. Four years ago the department was promised money to fully equip the majors biology courses, and these monies were not funded by the administration. Inflexible and unreasonable policies by the administration concerning counseling and registration prevented Chuck Brown with the choices of turning away deserving and needy students or overloading the class. Chuck Brown chose the latter which eventually lead to difficulties in coordinating laboratory work. This also resulted in a shortage of texts. In addition, the individual who promised to assist Mr. Brown in reading and tutoring students, found that he was going to be too busy, ~~and~~ and at the last minute informed Mr. Brown of his decision. Chuck's teaching load for the first six weeks was 21 hours a week. The majority of faculty on this campus only has 15 hours per instructor per week. In addition Chuck Brown had to leave class early every two weeks on Wed. afternoon (sometimes more often) to meet commitments for Academic Senate meetings.

The combination of external influences, unnecessary, and ~~unfavorable~~ influences and circumstances led to a poorly organized course.

Please consider my comments as both direct and positive. I do not consider the original writeup ^(student comments) at all constructive ^{if published}. The course Bio 5 has had growing pains — each year we have made improvements and more will be coming. I feel that any of the student evaluations made according to your questions in the poll, is valuable information for me, but if published could have deleterious results.

Chuck Brown

Circumstances involving strife and dissention within our department have prevented me from attaining the idealized course I prefer to teach. Please do not print this as it would bias the future student — even when great changes are being made and will go into effect in fall.

C. Brown

Also — it appears as though administrators would prefer that instructors win popularity contests — ① more bodies in the class = more ADA ② Easier courses = happier student = better rapport with public.

So be it.

SUBJECT: Faculty Evaluation by students in Biology 5.

Do not publish in any form (including computer printout, comments by students, or the revised comments by Donna Courtney) the faculty evaluation of me by students in my classes (Biology 5, Spring 1974).

Thank you very much.

* Re: Comments about my History 17A class,
the "long lectures" part,

Please consider that my History 17A class in this Spring Semester when the poll was taken was a $1\frac{1}{2}$ hour class. That is a long lecture!

But the same class (I will have two sections)
will be only a 50 minute lecture in the Fall.

I question whether "long lectures" will be a valid statement in guiding students for next Fall!

I think this idea is a good one but in all fairness to student & instructor lets be as accurate as possible.

I would like to see you inform the students that the remarks reflect individual comments (positive as well as negative) and not a statistical cross section, ~~but a random~~ and in fact they may only represent but a few ^{students} remarks or feelings of the class.

also include in my section that the students should disregard the grade on labs
because there is no lab as such in Soc. 10 or Soc. 10 as far as that goes. also include a remark to the effect that I don't normally lecture as one thinks of a lecture the class not being based on that method.

Also please make the changes requested
on the remarks from Soc. 10.

With these additions and changes I approve the inclusion of my classes in the Faculty Evaluation.
I think they improve the student's chances of getting a more accurate picture of the classes. → keep going

Action by the SRJC trustees

The Santa Rosa Junior College board of trustees last night:

— Deferred action on a group of proposed Evening College English courses it considers "controversial."

— Established the architect's fee for services relating to the new earth science building at 8 per cent of the construction cost, estimated at $1.5 million. The firm of Lawrence Simons & Associates will do the work.

— Approved increasing the COIL program budget by $3,650 to cover the cost of keeping the center open in the evening from 4:30 to 9 p.m.

— Approved continued participation in the SHARE tutorial program at a cost of up to $8,000.

— Tabled a proposal to charge a $2 motorcycle parking fee beginning with the fall semester. A question was also raised on whether fees should be charged for bikes, which are parked in the same guarded area as motorcycles.

— Agreed to accept suggestions for naming the new swim center up until the August board meeting.

— Received copies of the first 1974-75 preliminary general fund budget showing an estimated income of $9,713,219 and proposed expenditures of $9,207,599, leaving some $500,000 in unallocated funds to cover such items as salary increases.

— Set a special meeting for 4 p.m. on June 24 to do further work on the budget.

An SRJC class for the undecided

A course designed for students undecided about a major in college is being offered during the summer session at Santa Rosa Junior College, which starts June 19.

Guidance 61 is designed to give undecided students an opportunity to do some exploration, thinking and planning before signing up for a possible program in a major during the Fall semester. The course will be offered in two sections, one meeting from 8:30 to 10 a.m., and one from 10:30 a.m. until noon.

There will be small group workshops in career planning and class activities will include self-evaluation, job interview practice, visitations to employment sites in the county, exploration of career programs at the college and a review of job opportunities in various career fields.

The course is open to all high school graduates or other persons over 18 who have been out of school for at least a semester.

Interested persons may register through the Summer Session office in Bailey Hall at SRJC. Additional information is available from the counseling department at the college.

The Santa Rosa Junior College board of trustees last night:

— Deferred action on a group of proposed Evening College English courses it considers "controversial."

— Established the architect's fee for services relating to the new earth science building at 8 per cent of the construction cost, estimated at $1.5 million. The firm of Lawrence Simons & Associates will do the work.

— Approved increasing the COIL program budget by $3,650 to cover the cost of keeping the center open in the evening from 4:30 to 9 p.m.

— Approved continued participation in the SHARE tutorial program at a cost of up to $8,000.

— Tabled a proposal to charge a $2 motorcycle parking fee beginning with the fall semester. A question was also raised on whether fees should be charged for bikes, which are parked in the same guarded area as motorcycles.

— Agreed to accept suggestions for naming the new swim center up until the August board meeting.

— Received copies of the first 1974-75 preliminary general fund budget showing an estimated income of $9,713,219 and proposed expenditures of $9,207,599, leaving some $500,000 in unallocated funds to cover such items as salary increases.

— Set a special meeting for 4 p.m. on June 24 to do further work on the budget.

An SRJC class for the undecided

A course designed for students undecided about a major in college is being offered during the summer session at Santa Rosa Junior College, which starts June 19.

Guidance 61 is designed to give undecided students an opportunity to do some exploration, thinking and planning before signing up for a possible program in a major during the Fall semester. The course will be offered in two sections, one meeting from 8:30 to 10 a.m., and one from 10:30 a.m. until noon.

There will be small group workshops in career planning and class activities will include self-evaluation, job interview practice, visitations to employment sites in the county, exploration of career programs at the college and a review of job opportunities in various career fields.

The course is open to all high school graduates or other persons over 18 who have been out of school for at least a semester.

Interested persons may register through the Summer Session office in Bailey Hall at SRJC. Additional information is available from the counseling department at the college.

SRJC delays action on "controversial" classes

By DIANE MORGAN
The Santa Rosa Junior College board of trustees last night refused to take action on proposed Evening College English courses it considers to be "controversial."

Deferred for further study were five courses in what is known as the "English 200" series — "Community Standards: Literature and Pornography," "Women's Literature in Russia, 1920-1974," "The Question of Race in Recent American Literature," "The Hero of Violence," and "Language and Society."

Most of the criticism fell on the proposed course dealing with pornography.

"What do you proposed to answer that the Supreme Court can't?" challenged board member John Lounibos to English Department proponents. "I don't see any learning value in this course whatsoever."

College President Roy

SRJC board

Mikalson joined the ranks of the dubious. "This would have to deal with things pornographic," he stated. "That would shake me up a little."

English instructor Joseph Alvarez, who proposed the course, explained that he saw it as "experimental" and in general, "The exploration of the problem of pornography and the moral, artistic and political questions it raises."

Recommended reading for the eight-week course would include "Ulysses," "Lady Chatterly's Lover," "Tropic of Cancer," "Candy," and "Lolita."

The word "frivolous" was used to describe other courses in the group.

"It looks like we're combing the woods, looking for courses to teach," remarked board member John Jacobs.

"When it comes to presenting controversial subjects, I'm not sure we should be involved," commented Walter Haehl.

Albert Maggini, who had started the discussion by indicating he had questions about some of the proposals, stated: "I think that considering the money, time and space involved, we have better things to do."

The board approved some new courses in the fields of art, business, English and science but deleted the English 200 series for the time being.

In other action last night the SRJC board:

—Agreed to turn over a $21,721 check from the estate of Vernie M. Washburn for a scholarship fund in memory of her sister, Mattie Washburn, to the SRJC Foundation. In a related matter the board agreed with a preliminary proposal by former college president Randolph Newman that the Foundation have more non-SRJC employes on its board of directors.

SUBJECT: Long distant phone calls

There is no reason for anyone to make a long distant phone call on the Associated Students line, 544-0822. If you must make a long distant call please clear it through either April Lynn Williams or David Herrington. Please do not make any long distant calls after office hours. This request is necessary due to $37.00 worth of unauthorized phone calls on last months phone bill.

Speech given at Santa Rosa Junior College for the 1974
Spring Commencement Exercises by Jack Silver

Enlarging the Framework

Good morning, Guests of Commencement. I am Jack Silver. One very good reason why I am here today is because, four years ago a teacher, of a very different sort than you would find on campuses such as this, said to me, "Jack, enlarge the framework." Back then I was asking some pretty good questions.

"How came I to be?"

"What am I?"

"To serve what purpose?"

"To go again!?"

I was having trouble answering these questions, because, you see, I was also dropping tons of acid, smoking and dealing in dope, clearly eluding the police while bouncing up and down upon their patrol cars in down town Petaluma, or defending myself eloquently in court with an undisciplined but clever intelligence.

I knew something then, I knew it most excruciatingly too well. I was alive. I was breathing. I existed. Do you know that you exist? Here! Now! We never bother to think about it! We take our existence for granted. So much so that we equate existence with reality. Did you ever ask yourself as to the purpose to our life? Probably you didn't get a full answer, so you stopped asking.

We can never fully answer the question as to the purpose of our life. But does this mean that it should not be asked?

We cannot doubt that we have our roots in the natural order. Classified we are of the phylum: Chordata--Sub phylum: Verbrata--class: Mammalian--order: Primate--family: Homindiae--genus: Homo--species: Sapien. I learned that in Steve Barnhart's biology class. We do and can wonder if our fruits belong to that same world. Which seems to us to be only a material one. Is there some affinity between the total man, you and I, and the total universe, which is you and I and everything else. Or, are we but an accidental intruder upon the cosmic scene? This question is one that should concern each one of us, for upon the answer to this vital question hang the decisions as to the values that will make our lives. A total question deserves a total answer. To consider such questions we must not only think in different ways, but must arrive at new understandings, and new attitudes. For attitude is everything. Attitudes attract our life. If we get what we ask for, the germ of that asking has been in our own attitude. So if we seek to enlarge our framework, we must first seek new attitudes. Something we usually don't like doing. For any good biologist knows that the organism seeks to protect itself. To think in different ways, to have new attitudes means that the organism must change.

New attitudes, of course, are required--now more than ever, in a world drawn closer together and drastically changed by mass communication. Is there some way in which we might enlarge our framework to increase world co-operation?

In the early 1900's a man, by the name of George Gurdjieff, came out of the East with many things for the West. One of which was the knowledge, "you cannot understand and disagree." What can this mean? When we see how a person arrives at their conclusions we may say that they are not correct. . .for us.

When we look at how they arrived at their conclusions, the knowledge they had and circumstances under which they were living, we see that they could have made no other decision. We can never truly disagree with fact, only strive to understand process.

We live in a world where communication is secondary to disagreement. Thus, it is safe to say that we live in a world with much misunderstanding and little chance for peaceful co-operation. Reconciliation is only possible when we realize that each one of us possesses a different framework.

Let us go to another framework...life. Someday this physical form will no longer exist, as it does now. Does that thought bother you? It shouldn't for we are already more dead than you might think. Any time we restrict our framework, forget our purpose, we form a closed system. Any closed system is automatically dead. For life is the relationship between ourself and our environment. For instance, how many times have you found yourself in a situation of being able to act differently and said, "I couldn't do that, it wouldn't be me." And who, as the caterpillar in Carrol's Alice in Wonderland said, "are you?" How willing are we to be? To choose what to be, how to be, what to do and to own for the self now and forever--our lives, our acts, our experiences and our real-I's-ations. Do we, for instance, arise in the morning wondering what kind of day we are going to have or do we decide what kind of day we will to have? Take a simple thing like clothing. The way we dress is very indicative of the way we restrict our lives. How limited is the concept of the clothes you would see yourself wear? Of course you say, "I dress this way because it is neat", or because, "I don't want to be restricted--you know, uptight looking." There are always good reasons, thousands, but only a few real ones. The way we sit, the way we talk, the way we look at the world is as limited as the wardrobe we would imagine for our-selves. "But I am like the artist." you say, "I have my own style." But it is not style, like any artist, it is only limitation and conditioning.

The cosmic game is in process, and we recognize that the unknown player abides loyally by the rules that he, himself, has made. The search for these rules not only enables us to follow the game, but may even tell us something of the player. How well does each one of us play? And in what capacity or framework? When we do realize where the actual parameter of our life lies, then and only then can we go beyond that framework. It is much like the man who thinks he is in New York but is really in Santa Rosa and wants to get to Denver. He is going to have a hell of a time getting there. Yet each and everyone of us has a great deal of difficulty letting ourselves know where we are so that we can proceed with our aim rationally and practically.

We have set a task in front of ourselves. It is to see how things are. For isn't that what education is about anyway? And if it is not, it is our responsibility to make it so! If this is to be accomplished, no difficulties can be put aside for future study, nor can authentic elements of experience be ignored. There is ample evidence, as a result of innumerable trials, that a unified world -- conception cannot be reached in terms of our current forms of thought.

With us today we have educators, parents, students, and miscellaneous people of all sorts. Even within these artificial divisions of people there are further divisions: Administrators and teachers, Biologists and Humanists, Activists and Pacifists. We all see the world differently, according to what we know and what we want to see. If we truly wish to see how things are, we must accept the consequences, and we will begin to think in new ways and acquire new attitudes. However strange and even repugnant they may be to our cherished convictions. It will happen. And we can do it.

The canvas upon which the future picture of God, Man, and the Universe will be painted will need to be vastly greater than any that the mind of man has yet conceived.

Thankyou very much and choose to have a good day.

SPRING 1974

-- SANTA ROSA JUNIOR COLLEGE --

By: Carolyn Rokke

GRADUATION: A New Beginning

Good-morning Dr. Mikalson, members of the Board, faculty and fellow students.

Well! We've taken our finals, written papers, done a lot of studying, probably even more worrying, and we've finally made it through another semester. But wait a minute -- this time its a little different. We won't be coming back to this campus next semester: We're graduating. Some of us will be going on to a state college or university to continue our education through the school system. Others of us will be going out to become a part of the working community, continuing our education in that way.

These graduation exercises are more than a ritual. If that was all I felt it were, I wouldn't have bothered coming today. I have no room in my life for empty rituals. In a sense we are always graduating. The word graduate means to change be degrees, and we do this all through our lives. These ceremonies bring together all of the accomplishments of the past few years to give us a chance to assess ourselves -- see where we have been, how far we have come and where we can go from here. It's like a light that enters a lens. The rays of light are drawn from many directions into a small area and when the rays pass through the lens, they are refracted out in new directions again.

As we pass through this day, as we head off in new directions, we must remember to bring the knowledge we gained on this campus along with us. This knowledge can pave the way for bright futures for all of us.

One of the most important things we gained in college to take into the world is the development of our abilities to think and to reason. All through the schooling process, the greater emphasis has been placed on who, what, when, where, and how. Why has always been present, especially in our own minds, but it was too often either given only limited exposure, or stated as a fact. An example of this is when we learned about the Great Depression. In high school we asked: Why did the Depression occur? We are told that prices in that time were greatly inflated, people could not afford the high prices, the supply became greater than the demand, people were laid off work, less people could afford the high prices, and so on in a vicious circle.

Now when we got to college, we could tell anyone why the Depression occurred -- on the surface. But, there are now deeper questions to be asked. Why didn't our leaders recognize what was happening? Why did the public run in such a panic to sell their stocks? What could have been done to keep our economy from failing so miserably? There are more questions that could be asked, and there are no hard and fast answers to any of these. Through lectures and our readings we can develop probable theories to answer questions and we must use the facts we have learned to back up our ideas.

We have also reached a point in our own lives where we are saying why. Often times the answers that satisfied us before are no longer valid. On this campus, both in and out of the classroom, we have come into contact with so many new and different thoughts, ideas, beliefs, and lifestyles, religions, political persuasions -- small wonder that college students often seem confused and frustrated. As we go through the process of wading through unimportant details to reach the crux of the matter in our school-work, we also learn to apply this same principle to our own lives to learn what is important for us, and why.

The instructors on this campus have set a good example for us. Sure they teach us, that is their primary purpose. But, they are also always learning, from each other, and their students. Many times during a lecture I have seen a hand go up. The instructor will stop to listen to a new idea, a new piece of information, or a question. When questions are asked, the answer is often open to discussion -- more ideas are presented and more questions asked. Through this communication process, our knowledge of a subject becomes much more thorough than if we were only given one view point. In a situation like this, everyone benefits -- the student and the instructor.

Unless we choose to become hermits or recluses, communication is going to be very important to both success and happiness in our public and private lives. Communication means listening and learning as well as talking and teaching. If all people would remember to open their ears and their minds to really listen and absorb, this world would be a better, more peaceful place to live.

I'm not trying to say we should all placidly agree with each other. Then life would become boring rather than peaceful. But, not agreeing with someone does not mean we cannot respect their right to have a viewpoint. As I said before, by the time we reach this point in our lives there are very few hard and fast answers. Two people may take the same piece of knowledge and come up with two totally different applications.

In this day and age, knowledge is often thought of and used as a weapon. I prefer to think that knowledge, if used wisely and well, is a tool rather than a weapon. Weapons do nothing constructive. They are made for only one purpose, and that is to destroy. On the other hand, a tool can be used in a variety of ways. The number of uses are limited only by how far our imaginations will carry us. We can use our knowledge as a crowbar, opening up new paths for ourselves and others. Used as a hammer and nails, our knowledge can hold together or strengthen our existing structures. As a saw or a chisel, we can use our knowledge to cut and mold either situations to fit ourselves, or ourselves to fit certain situations.

Theodore Roosevelt has said that a man with no schooling may steal from a freight car, but if he has a university education, he may steal the whole railroad. We can use the knowledge our college experience has given us to get the railroad, get it going on the right track, and we can be the best heads our railroad has ever had.

Program Compliance Review Phase II
Project No. 49-70946-1366-4-01

Dr. Roy Mikalson, President/Superintendent
Santa Rosa Jr. College Day Care Center
1501 Mendocino Avenue
Santa Rosa, CA 95401

Dear Dr. Mikalson:

The second phase of the Program Compliance Review is currently in progress. This phase includes a review of attendance and expenditure accounting, certification, and eligibility of children and fee collection practices.

This is to advise you that the following person/s will be visiting your project to complete this phase of the compliance review.

Reviewer(s)

Date(s)

Mr. Larry Daniels

June 27, 1974

It would be most beneficial if the following records you have maintained for the past 12 months be made available for the reviewer/s.

Children's records - which would include certification documentation, parent income, and fee information.

"Report of Attendance and Income", Form CE-CC-10 or CD-10.

"Monthly Report of Income, Attendance, and Expenditures for Child Development Program", Form CD-5.

In most cases the review will utilize a sampling method. The duration of the review will be determined by the size of your project.

Thank you for your assistance thus far with the program compliance reviews.

Should you have questions or concerns regarding this review, please contact your area administrator at the Child Development Programs Support Unit (916) 445-9903 or (916) 322-2344.

Sincerely,

WILLIAM D. WHITENECK,
Assistant Superintendent of Public Instruction

Dear Sirs,

This letter is in response to the proposal of the Parking Committee to require a $2.00 parking fee for motorcycles on campus.

At the June 17th meeting of the Executive Cabinet of the Associated Students, it was brought to our attention that the Parking Committee of S.R.J.C. had made a proposal to the Board of Trustees to approve a $2.00 parking fee for motorcycles registered on campus. In reading the minutes of the Parking Committee meeting of May 17th, the Executive Cabinet was unable to find any justification for this proposal. Our representative to the Parking Committee, Gregory Champion, indicated that the measure was approved only to add more money to the Parking Program coffers.

In addition to a lack of justification, several questions were raised in regard to the fairness of this proposed policy. If motorcycles are required to pay and still have to park in the Bicycle Compound, why not also charge bicycles that park there? Why charge a fee to motorcyclists who are saving parking slots by parking in the compound? Also, when the original parking fee was initiated by the Board last year, it was discussed at that time whether to require motorcyclists to pay to register their motorcycles. The idea was not approved at that time, and we see no reason to change that policy now.

Keeping this information in mind, the Executive Cabinet voted at their June 17th meeting to send a letter to the Board of Trustees urging you not to adopt the $2.00 Motorcycle Parking Fee.

On behalf of the Executive Cabinet,

Sincerely,

Stephen Hemphill
Corresponding Secretary

SUBJECT: Counter telephone next to P.A. amplifier.

Last Spring a switch was installed on Mrs. Fischer's telephone to control the telephone next to the P.A. amplifier. The purpose of this switch is to try and limit the unauthorized calls on our telephones. The switch should remain in the "OFF" position except when one of you wants to use it. Since Mrs. Fischer or the secretary at her desk often has other duties they sometimes forget to turn the switch off. Please help us by telling the secretary when you are finished with your call so that she may turn off the switch.

Also, PLEASE, no long distance calls without permission from Miss Williams or myself.

Thank you for your understanding and cooperation.

EVALUATION footnote: 1st draft

This is ~~an~~ an attempt to establish a line of communication between students who will never know each other, and to help those students who wish to better their educational potential. Within this evaluation, a group of C.S.A. members attempted to fulfill an idea - to establish a concept that would re-occur within semesters yet to come. That is to provide statistics, as a result of the students polled in the spring of 1974, that will indicate an instructor's ability and methodology in a given class listed at S.R.J.C.

I do not believe this evaluation to be complete; several errors were made in the course of compiling the data. However, as it was the first attempt at a poll this size - mistakes were to be expected. It was felt by the Fall '74 Executive Cabinet that these 10 copies should be issued for the benefit of those who took part in filling out the poll cards last spring and for those who are unfamiliar with such evaluations.

Here, then, ^{are} ~~is the first~~ efforts of a ~~Student~~ Teacher Evaluation ^{by students} on this campus.

Sincerely,

Gregory D. Champion

15 July 1974

Dear Student Body President,

I am writing to you representing the Associated Students of Santa Rosa Junior College in Santa Rosa. In my position as Corresponding Secretary, I have taken it upon myself to try and find out what other Community Colleges in our area are doing, and what direction their Student Government is taking.

What I propose is to exchange formal as well as informal information between our schools. Enclosed please find a copy of the Agenda and Minutes of our last Executive Cabinet Meeting, along with a brief explanation of the organization and duties of our College Student Assembly (CSA). We hope that in return, you will send us, regularly, copies of the Agendas and Minutes of your Student Government Meetings, and any other materials explaining the problems (and solutions) you have come up with in matters relating to students. With such an exchange of information, I believe we may keep ourselves better informed as to what we may do to strengthen our Student Body at Santa Rosa Junior College.

If this idea interests you, or if you have any questions, please feel free to contact me, or Greg Champion, Student Body President. We will be glad to furnish any additional information. Our address is:

Teacher Evaluation Footnote:
(2nd draft)

This is an attempt to establish a line of communication ^{among} students as well as to improve our ~~who will never know each other, and to help those students who wish to increase their educational experience.~~ With this evaluation, a group of CSA members ^{have} ~~attempted~~ to begin such an evaluation that would re-occur ^{within} every other semester (or as needed). This evaluation has provided statistics as a result of the students polled in the Spring of '74. These statistics should give an indication of an instructor's ability and methodology in a given class at SRJC.

I do not believe this poll to be complete; several errors were made in the course of compiling the data. However, as it was the first attempt at a poll this size, mistakes were to be expected. It was felt by the Fall '74 Executive Cabinet that these ten copies should be issued during registration for the benefit of those who took part in filling out the poll cards last Spring and for those who are new to this college.

Here, then, are the first efforts of a student, ^{conducted} Teacher Evaluation on this campus.

COMMENTS:

'Granola State' or college?

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following appeared as an editorial in the Rohnert Park News. It was written by Paul Lit-sky, who was editor of the Cal State KEY, a student publication at California State College, Sonoma.

The unofficial word came out this week that Sonoma State might drop out of the Far Western Conference. Coaches in the P. E. Department met with the president of the College Monday and decided to send a letter to participating schools warning that CSCS may drop out.

Financial problems have been cited as the overriding reason the Cossacks are leaving the Far West Conference. Coach Trumbo quit because he could not get steady financial backing for his team. CSCS was facing legal problems remaining in the conference because they did not have a football team.

But, as past Editor of the Cal State KEY, I know the reasons for CSCS leaving the Far West Conference are quite different. The Cossack Associates have been very successful in raising the money the school needed, and it was eventually ruled that CSCS did not need to field a football team.

Without a student government, and with little or no communication taking place between students and the faculty and administration, the faculty and administration have some misplaced notions about student goals and desires on the Sonoma campus.

Since the late 60's, the Administration has been operating under the fallacy that all students want is meditation and "far out" courses on the fringes of the classic disciplines. The Psychology Department has helped foster this misconception, but they themselves were forced to admit this year that what they offered was of little use to students after they graduate.

Students have changed drastically since the "campus revolutions" of the 60's. Sonoma State reacted favorably to this change when it first took place, providing special studies courses and innovative programs as well as minority studies, all of which are excellent ideas. But the administration and the faculty have not kept up with other changes taking place in the minds of the student body.

Students today, and always, want to be challenged by their professors. Sure, we want innovative and new courses, but we want to learn in these courses. Fewer students are accepting "credit/no credit" as an alternative to letter grades.

At the same time, the students at CSCS are quite aware they are being taken advantage of by both the faculty and the administration. That the administration felt free to take over office space in a student building without even bothering to notify us was quite a slap in the students' faces. The faculty exclusion of students on the Presidential Selection Advisory Committee was another slap in the students' faces. Students have no control over where our funds go on campus, and we are sick of it.

You may be wondering about how all this relates to the basketball team. The administration and faculty do not know what student sentiment is regarding a basketball team. In recent years, a great deal of pride has come to the students because a small college like Sonoma was able to place first in the Far West Conference. Any faculty or administration members who attended Cossack games last semester must have noticed that more than half the audience was made up of students. There was much talk and much pride in the achievements of the Cossacks last semester.

The standard joke on campus is to rename Sonoma State "Granola State." This joke marks a low ebb in student pride for their college.

This semester, the victory of the Cossacks brought back some of that pride. Only a student government of some sort (even if it is not in the traditional form) can succeed in bringing back some student pride in the college. Though the faculty will overtly support such a student move, it will mean a reduction in their power on campus, which is why they have been so remiss in supporting some of the past attempts (including the Students' Co-op, which failed for lack of support).

Whatever the faculty and administration may think, students want desperately to have some pride in their institution. But how can we students have pride when we are not a part of any decision making on campus? How can we have pride when major offices on campus are being investigated by the State for corruption? How can we have pride when our championship basketball team is cancelled without even asking us about it? How can we, as students, take pride in our accomplishments at this college when the college is in such ill repute?

The question is, shall we remain "Granola State" or become a college once again.

Acting Activities Advisor

SUBJECT: Secretarial area

Your cooperation in the following will be appreciated.

The secretaries employed in the Student Activities Office have supplies located in the front secretarial area that they often need at a moments notice. There has been some inadvertent or conscious evaporation of these supplies. There are also items (money, stamps, etc.), that are not for general use, located in this area.

Please do not use this area for anything. If you need something from this area, please ask one of the Student Secretaries, April, Bev or myself.

Thank you for your understanding and cooperation in this matter.

WILMA SINGER
In New SRJC Post

SRJC names new director

Three times Wilma Singer walked in to register at Santa Rosa Junior College in the fall of 1968. And three times she went home without even looking through the class schedule.

The fourth time she made it but all through that first semester on campus she was "totally disoriented."

"I felt like I could walk out of a class, away from school and no one would ever miss me.

"I understand the fear that there is in older women. I'm sure most women feel at a certain point in their lives after their kids are gone that if they dropped out of the world, no one would care."

This kind of empathy is no doubt one of the reasons Wilma Singer was chosen for the newly created position of women's reentry director at her alma mater.

The job description calls for her to coordinate happenings at the women's center "to make a well rounded program for all women" as well as to recruit older women on campus.

Her recruiting policy is not going to be based on "go to school and get a job" she said. "Times are too tough, and many women can argue that after four years of education they may only wind up with a $400 a month clerical job."

Wilma went back to school when she was 33 years old at the urging of a friend, "who looked at my red, rough hands and asked if all I was doing with my life was the dishes?"

After two years at SRJC she went on to California State College, Sonoma, where she ended up writing her own major for teaching English as a second language. Since graduating she's taught at Empire College, begun day school for Spanish-speaking adults in Windsor and most recently taught seventh grade at Herbert Slater Junior High School.

She and her husband, Mervyn, who operates a feed store in Windsor, have three children, ages, 18, 15 and 13.

Indicating that she speaks from experience, she said, "when a woman goes back to school or gets involved in anything outside of her home, it can hurt others. Your inclination is to feel guilty about being self-centered, that maybe you're asking for too much.

"But if it does mean a lot, then you must insist on it."

MEMORANDUM

To: Robert Maggiora, Dean of Business Services
Eugene Canevari, advisor, Associated Students
Chita Cazares, Finance Commissioner,
Associated Students

March 27, 1974

From: Jack Perella, Director of Forensics

Subject: purchase of specially struck medals for use as tournament awards

The purpose of this memorandum is to summarize agreements reached between the above named parties during a meeting yesterday in Mr. Maggiora's office.

I had requested the meeting to make a final decision on the "Medal Project", a proposal which had been under discussion for about a year. Each year the Forensics Team sponsors two high school speech tournaments and the SR Invitational for junior colleges. The cost of trophies for these tournaments has inflated in past years to such a degree that a substitute was sought. About a year ago I investigated the possibility of having a custom medallion struck for use as an award. The cost projections were very good and indicated a savings of about 1/3 over conventional trophies (with, in my own opinion, an aesthetic advantage as well). The problem is that 250 medals must be struck at once, and a one time die charge paid. The above parties all agree that such a medal should be struck under the following terms:

- 1- The one-time die charge of 380.00 will be borne outright by the district with 73-74 funds.
- 2- The cost of the medals will be advanced by the Associated Students, with return ultimately guaranteed by the District.

The first striking will consist of:

100 bronze medals ($4.07@).....	407.00
75 silver medals ($4.93@).....	369.75
75 gold medals ($4.93@).....	369.75
4 sterling silver($35.00@).....	140.00
254 boxes for medals ($1.60@).....	406.40
6% sales tax.....	101.52
	1,794.42

(44.45 EA)

Purchase will be from Hall's Trophies as detailed in the attached bid. All prices are firm through April 1, except for the sterling silver medals (given to the top speaker at the J.C. Invitational each year) which may fluctuate slightly with bullion prices. Delivery to be June 1974.

- 3- The S.R.J.C. Forensics Team will purchase the necessary number of medals from the Associated Students at the time of each tournament. It is anticipated that all medals will be paid for within three years (June 1977), with a "re-fill" order to be placed in the fall of 1976 should the program prove successful. Medals will be purchased from Associated Students at cost, and may not be used by any organization except the S.R.J.C. Forensics Team or the Speech Department.

- 4- Medals will be stored and inventoried by the Associated Students.
- 5- The Speech Department commits itself to continue to sponsor the current tournaments for the next three years, or until the medals are paid for.
- 6- If, for any reason, the Speech Department/Forensics Team should default on its commitment, the District would assume financial responsibility for the medals.

3/28/74

Mr. Maggion

- 7- The medals for use at the High School Tournaments will be purchased from Speech Dept. - Instructional Supplies funds.

Cal theater retains charm

EDITOR: Last Saturday night, after the scheduled film was over, I had the privilege of exploring the California Theater backstage. Let me preface this by saying that the management of the Cal was extremely generous not only in allowing this tour, but in supplying pieces of information regarding the history of the theater.

I was not alone in this tour. Fifty members of Santa Rosa Junior College's Summer Repertory Theater program were along with me. May I explain first that the members of SRT are among the most experienced and knowledgeable theater students in all of California. Needless to say, these students were impressed by the size of the stage (the largest in Northern California). In addition to its impressive history, there lies in this theater such potential that Santa Rosa has yet to realize (as a theatre of the performing arts).

Granted the exterior of the building is in need of a face lift, but then isn't everything that has withstood the neglect of a community?

As an actor in over 20 shows at the Junior College, as a student body president who is interested in his community, and most importantly, as a Santa Rosan, I strongly urge the Press Democrat to reconsider your position on the Cal Theater. Please, tour the theater yourselves with someone who can share with you its vast possibilities as a theater. Help recreate that American tradition of vaudeville and of family entertainment. If Santa Rosa must be progressive, let's maintain some of our charm.

SRJC offers evening potpourri

Want to take a cartooning class taught by Charles Schultz of "Peanuts" fame? How about a semester of ice hockey? Or do you prefer something less physical such as macrame?

You can learn about yeast breads and Japanese cuisine, unless you're more concerned about the psychology of overeating.

Whether your interests are academic and directed to subjects such as History of U.S. and China, or if you want practical pointers on how to become a foster parent, there is bound to be a course for you at the Sonoma County Junior College.

The JC's District Evening College Continuing Education for Adults catalogue for fall of 1974 is fatter than ever. If one didn't reach your doorstep, phone 527-4441 and ask about registering. Applications will be accepted up to and including the first week of evening classes which begin September 10.

Self improvement

Some enrolled as transfer students, knowing they can get the first 60 units of a four-year academic degree program even though it may take longer and mean attending classes four nights a week. Many are taking self-improvement courses or ones that will lead to job promotions as well as brand new occupations. And a lot of people sign up for night school because it is stimulating and, often, a lot of fun.

There are many no-credit classes which fall into the latter category, though often they deal with academic subjects as varied as biology or television. Besides past offerings, 17 new listings are in this category alone.

Public swimming

COIL, the Center for Independent Studies, has extended its hours so evening students who want tutorial assistance can benefit from the facilities. The Bernard Plover Library is open 8 - 10 Monday through Thursday evenings as is the bookstore. Evening students can enjoy public swimming Wednesday nights, and many of the other facilities of the day school student are available to after dark enrollees.

The success of the Gold Card, which waives tuition and provides special privileges for senior citizens, adds to the anticipation that the Evening College enrollment will continue to increase. There is an influx of new teachers, both from on and off campus, to accommodate the increased expectations.

Though the majority of classes are held on the Mendocino Avenue campus 7-10 Monday through Friday, a great deal of flexibility is afforded.

There are numerous Saturday courses and ones between 5-7, as well as during the day. Cloverdale, Eldridge, Forestville, Gualala, Guerneville, Sonoma, Healdsburg, Petaluma, Point Arena, Rohnert Park, Sea Ranch and Sebastopol are the locations of off-campus listings.

You may have to miss a favorite television series, but chances are you can even plan your curriculum so free evenings and special interests can happily combine.

SANTA ROSA JUNIOR COLLEGE

August, 1974

"A DETRIMENTAL AND COMPETITIVE THREAT" IS the way a motel industry trade magazine describes the growing practice of colleges and universities renting on-campus rooms to outsiders.

The July issue of "Motel/Motor Inn Journal" reports that their industry recently pulled the hand of the Defense Department and poured cold water on the proliferation of cut-rate, military operated motels on campuses around the country." The magazine warns its subscribers that the outside rental of dorm space is even more damaging because it appeals to a broader based market than military motels.

The article reports that colleges and universities in growing numbers are making use of excess dorm space in the summer by renting rooms to travelers, "often at bargain basement prices." Some plan to rent extra rooms the year round and there are even indications that some colleges are turning after convention business, says the gazine.

A recent decision by the Wisconsin Supreme Court should allay the motel operators' fears somewhat. A proposal to rent state U. dorm rooms to the elderly was ruled legal. The court said that by law, the buildings may only be used for education-related purposes.

REGISTRATION HASSLES—STUDENTS SHUFFLING from one end of campus to another, and lines everywhere—may soon become a thing of the past. A computerized registration system proposed for 1975 at the U. of Minnesota would make the normally tedious process as easy as buying an airline ticket, taking only two to six minutes from start to finish.

Four or five registration computer terminal locations are proposed for the 10,000-student campus to ease congestion. Under the proposal, students will give their desired class schedules to a clerk who will feed the information directly to the main computer. If the computer accepts the schedule, course cards and a fee statement will be printed out and the student may pay on the spot and walk away with all paperwork complete.

THE U. OF FLORIDA "ALLIGATOR," PERENNIAL one of the nation's top rated student newspapers is trying to find a solution to a financial problem which threatens the paper's fall publishing schedule. The "Alligator" has been completely independent of U. control and funding since last summer. When the paper became independent, F.U. turned over about $90,000 worth of assets to the paper which is being repaid through free advertising for the U. So far, the advertising trade-off has reduced the debt to $37,000.

"But," says the "Alligator's" incoming editor, "we were undercapitalized and we've always had a cash flow problem. We have reserves of $11,000 which will carry us through the end of the summer. But then we're faced with several weeks of no revenue before the fall term begins and then about another 60 days of our billing cycle before fall advertising money comes in. We just don't have the cash to pay our fixed costs, including salaries for seven full-time employes, during this period. We've got to come up with about $25,000 before September or we just won't be able to publish."

The "Alligator" is finding the economic situation very unfavorable for getting any financial support or loans from banks or other businesses, says the editor. "We are trying to work something out through either the U. or student government, but so far we've had no success."

THE MURDER OF A U. OF ALASKA-FAIRBANKS student in her dorm room has prompted a $1-million suit against the U. and several individual administrators.

The suit, brought by the parents of the slain student, charges that the U. was negigent in allowing the accused murderer, also a student, to continue at the U. after campus counselor and a psychologist had indicated that he was potentially dangerous.

S.A. SERVICES, A TORONTO-BASED TERMPAPER company currently advertising in U.S. student newspapers is the latest such enterprise to incur the wrath of the U.S. Postal Service. Postmasters in this country have received an instruction to watch for mail addressed to the firm and return it to the sender.

The Postal Service also issued a similar order for a Rhode Island firm which was reportedly a spin-off of the "Boston Four," the termpaper mills first put out of business several years ago.

The Postal Service has court cases pending with alleged termpaper companies in Washington, D.C. and Los Angeles.

COLLEGE STUDENTS ARE DISCOVERING AN IDEAL money-making opportunity in the growing number of plasma labs around the country. For a few hours a week, a donor can earn between $50 and $60 a month. Managers of labs located in college towns—as most of them are—report that 80% to 95% of their donors are students.

Unlike giving whole blood, the blood taken in plasma labs is immediately separated by centrifuge and the red cells are re-infused in the original donor within minutes. Consequently, an individual may donate as frequently as twice a week.

Most of the labs are owned by large pharmaceutical companies who need plasma as a base for various medications. One reason the plasma labs are growing in numbers is that many medicines have recently switched from horse plasma to human plasma as a base.

IT HAS BEEN SAID THAT HIGHER EDUCATION is the only place where the consumer strives to get less for his or her money. Students' use of purchased lecture notes and termpapers, pressure for relaxed grading and attendance requirements and lower average credit loads seem to confirm that thought.

A wise grocery shopper pays close attention to "unit pricing" and usually finds the best buy in the giant-sized package. But the trend among college students is toward the less thrifty smaller package.

With a leveling-off in number of students on campus, administrators are often perplexed to find full-time equivalent (FTE) shrinking. The FTE is simply the total number of student credit hours being given during a term divided by a standard full-time load, say 15 credits. That calculation reveals that on many campuses, students are taking fewer courses per term and the number of part-time students has increased dramatically in recent years.

A student taking a light load of 12 credits usually has fixed costs nearly equal to those of a student signed up for a full load of 18 credits. And the longer length of time necessary to complete the degree compounds the extravagance by prolonging the student's period of little or no personal income.

A recent American Council on Education report confirms that part-time students are at a decided disadvantage in terms of cost-per-credit and participation in financial aid programs and other campus services.

Why, in these times of inflation, does this trend toward less efficient use of time and facilities exist? For one thing, the analogy of the student as a consumer is not universally accepted. And, of course, high, full-time credit loads are not within the time or mental capacity of all students. And, too, the premium paid for the inefficiency of the light-load trend is blunted by the fact that only a small percentage of the cost actually comes out of the pockets of the students whose decisions underlie the trend.

A TEN-MEMBER STUDENT TASK FORCE IS working this summer planning college student participation in the country's Revolution Bicentennial celebration in 1976. The students, representing ten geographical areas of the country, will be on the campus of the U. of California at Los Angeles until Sept. 15 under the direction of the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration in Washington.

Some of the ideas the students are discussing include inter-college communication of Bicentennial news, media and art contests centered on the celebration's theme and a diploma design for the class of '76.

"THE DROP-OUT PHILOSOPHY AND THE SYMBOLISM of the counterculture seem to have lost the attraction they had for students only a few years ago. That alienation has been replaced by an effort—so earnest as to be almost deadly—to conform to the requirements of our society. No one knows what we have done to bring it about" — William J. McGill, President, Columbia U.

A BILL PASSED BY CONGRESS LAST WEEK AND awaiting the President's signature provides that "no federal funds shall be made available to any educational institution or agency that denies students the right to inspect and review any and all official records, files and other information, including all the material in the pupil's cumulative record." The bill will also give students the opportunity to challenge the information in their files and make corrections or remove misleading or inappropriate data.

In addition to grades and test scores, the bill would require student access to such documents as letters of recommendation and counselors' comments.

STUDENT LEADERSHIP SERVICES, INC. (SLS) is expanding its geographical area of operation with a ten-state regional leadership training conference at Lynchburg College (Va.) August 23-25.

The conference is being held in connection with the National Institute of Student Governments, a year-old organization still in the stage of securing initial financial support through industry and foundation grants.

SLS and NISG have several joint regional student conferences tentatively planned for other areas of the country later in the school year.

In addition to the regional conferences, SLS conducts annual spring and fall weekend sessions for student leaders from the state of Wisconsin as well as performing various leadership training and evaluative services for individual colleges and student organizations.

CONTENTED STUDENTS ARE FOUND ON THE U. Tennessee-Knoxville campus judging by a survey recently completed there. Ninety-four per cent of a representative cross-section polled there said they were "satisfied with their lives in general." Other areas of campus life and the percentage of students expressing satisfaction include: quality of housing (85%); outlook for personal future (83%); education they are receiving (83%); campus book store (81%); the student newspaper (80%); treatment of women students (74%); quality of on-campus housing (68%); treatment of black students (60%); performance of the UT-K Chancellor (60%).

Not all was rosy, of course. Dissatisfaction with campus parking was expressed by 85% and 72% didn't like the way the country is being governed.

Major problems, in order of concern, were rapes and other attacks on women, venereal disease, students' lack of money for education and student drug abuse.

UT students were nearly evenly split on the question of administrators' giving official recognition to gay organizations.

IN HALTING SIGN LANGUAGE, THE YOUNG MAN indicated that he had recently lost his voice and was new on the campus of Gallaudet College (Washington, D.C.), the nation's only liberal arts college for the deaf. Two fellow deaf students befriended the man.

Six months later, all three were sitting in court, the two students pleading guilty to possession of marijuana and the third man, the newcomer, testifying against them. The accuser, it turned out, was not a student nor was he handicapped. He was a "narc," an undercover narcotics agent, and his appearance on campus had been part of his assignment to infiltrate student life.

The days of throwing rocks at "pigs" may have passed, but the practice of using undercover agents, whether for narcotics or political surveillance, remains near the top of the list of things most despised by many college students. And whatever administrators' feelings on the subject may be, it is rare to find a college official publicly condoning the use of campus undercover agents or admitting any cooperation with them.

Even the hint of a police connection is often enough to make an outcast out of an otherwise popular student. Last month at the U. of Minnesota, for example, a student serving on the search committee for a new vice president quit after it was revealed that he had once worked for the FBI. Although his employment had been only as a night watchman, the connection was there and rather than face a series of charges, the student resigned. He said that he had also once considered running for a student government office, but decided against it knowing his FBI background would be an issue and an obstacle.

Paranoia among drug users and political activists undoubtedly causes estimates of undercover activity to be exaggerated. But a recent incident at Louisiana State U. would chill the heart of even the least paranoid.

Gus Tabony, an SDS and Progressive Students Alliance member and a vice president of the LSU Student Government Association was discovered to be a paid agent of the Baton Rouge

Police Department. Tabony was campaigning for the SGA presidency when the connection was revealed. The homes of two other SGA candidates were raided for drugs and an ensuing investigation turned up Tabony's name on police payroll records. Tabony admitted that he had been working for the force as an undercover agent for five years and had been paid $7200 the previous year. But he denied any involvement in the narcotics raids.

A rushed attempt to impeach Tabony failed just as his SGA term of office expired last April and today he is a uniformed Baton Rouge police officer.

Tabony shows no embarrassment about his role. The SDS membership was police work, he says, but his SGA office was not. "I really did become quite a bit more liberal because of my association with SDS," he laughs.

How extensive is campus undercover work? "Pretty extensive, I guess," says Tabony. "In my activities I ran into guys from about 15 agencies involved in surveillance. In the early days it could go as far as the CIA. We always got reports from other cities when it was believed that a certain group or individual was heading for LSU to organize. My job was to keep up with them to see if they were planning any violence or other illegal activity. But I never suppressed freedom of ideas or practiced entrapment."

"Of course there's a new guy on campus working for the police doing just what I was doing before my cover was blown. But I suppose he doesn't have quite as many things to watch as I did in 1968 when I first started working for the police."

The Fifth Estate, a national anti-spy organization, claims that such activities are likely a part of a federally funded intelligence and communications network. Faculty and student members of Fifth Estate at Kent State released a lengthy report last spring claiming identification of ten undercover agents operating on the KSU campus both before and after the 1970 shootings there. The report claims the existence of an "Ohio Master Plan" and an "Oklahoma Plan" for using campus undercover agents for intelligence and as provocateurs. Such plans, the group claims, are financed through federal agencies such as the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration. The KSU Fifth Estaters vow to continue their investigation and have even initiated legal action regarding the activities of the alleged agent.

Credibility is a problem when attempting to assess the extent of undercover surveillance on campus. Often the loudest accusations come from those whose rationality may be in doubt. Last month at Indiana U., for example, the Young Socialist Alliance released with much fanfare a tape recording in which one of its members reveals in some detail that he was a paid informant for the FBI. The YSA continues to reap publicity from the statement even though the "informer" has since vehemently retracted his story with the explanation that he was drunk and simply made up the tale to get attention.

Undercover surveillance is, obviously, taking place on the nation's campuses. But whether the activity is extensive, organized or even undesirable is a matter of conjecture based on personal point-of-view. A few years ago, a student organization on one western campus made a formal protest regarding the alleged use of undercover agents there. The group's complaint was, in all seriousness, that such activity "caused paranoia among campus drug users." Again, depending on point-of-view, such logic is hard to argue with.

THE GOVERNOR OF NEW HAMPSHIRE, A SUPPORTER of bans on campus homosexual organizations, almost found himself obligated to invite a representative of a local gay group to his home for breakfast.

The governor and his wife had agreed to play hosts to the top bidder in a fundraising auction. When the bidding began, it became apparent that the gay group had pooled resources and was intent on winning the breakfast as an opportunity for publicity and a chance to explain their viewpoints to the governor.

A state businessman finally outbid the gay group, but the breakfast cost him over $1,000.

STUDENT LEADERS IN SOUTH CAROLINA AND Florida are applauding recent "sunshine law" decisions by the attorneys general of those states. The U. of South Carolina Trustees will have to open committee meetings to the public. The Florida decision will require U. administrators to make public many "working papers" which have previously been confidential.

The decisions in both states were reportedly prompted by student government pressure.

N-CAMPUS CAPSULE COURSES:

U. of Oregon students may "challenge" a course they feel covers areas of knowledge they are already familiar with through outside experience. A challenging student is given a test and if it is passed, the student is given credit for the course. The president of the U. of Oklahoma Student Association didn't feel the SA attorney general was fulfilling his duties, so she withheld his salary. But the SA court awarded the student his back pay saying the president's action had no legal basis. Iowa State U. administrators and Ames city officials are involved in a series of meetings aimed at correcting alleged off-campus discrimination against minority students.

A nationwide theft ring is suspected of being behind a number of cases of stolen rare books. The books, usually extremely valuable, are taken from libraries, then the illustrations are cut out and sold as individual plates.

Evanston, Ill. city officials are reportedly attempting to enforce zoning laws against a "family" of unrelated young people living commune-like in a large house there. But zoning amendments are being discussed which would allow another unrelated group, a Christian Fellowship, to stay. An April decision by the U.S. Supreme Court allows cities to use zoning laws to bar "undesirable elements" from a community. "God is all powerful. He or She is all knowing." In a set of guidelines against linguistic sexism, a Temple U. professor of religion says that form is preferable to the use of the word "He" alone since theoretically God has no sex.

In a recent Ohio State U. poll, about half of the students opposed campus police carrying guns. About 30% felt the police should not enforce narcotics laws and only two of 346 students felt preventing alcohol and drug abuse was the most important police function.

Prisoners were used to install shelves in the library at the State U. of New York-Stony Brook. The U. found the inmates to do good work at bargain wages, 38¢ per hour.

The Wisconsin vegetable canning industry appealed to U. of Wisconsin Regents to adjust the school calendar to enable students to help in the harvest. An industry spokesman said the migrant labor work force has declined in recent years and students represent the only alternative seasonal workers.

- * The National Organization for Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML) reports that marijuana arrests rose from 292,000 in 1972 to 421,000 in 1973. Marijuana arrests represented 67% of all drug arrests in 1973, a big jump from previous years.
- * After an argument with a dorm manager, a Portland State U. student piled his belongings in the middle of his room, lit them on fire, then walked out.
- * After a 1970 rock-throwing riot at Indiana State U., the state attorney general filed a suit against the ISU Trustees claiming malfeasance, misfeasance or nonfeasance. Last month, the state court of appeals upheld a lower court's finding for the defendants.
- * In a speech before the local Chamber of Commerce, the president of Texas A&M U. warned that federal government encroachment is threatening the independence of higher education. HEW auditing, he said, "is something akin to harassment."
- * A variety of life-styles is offered in the 12 residence halls of Eastern Michigan U. Options available to students there include special living areas for freshmen, grad students, foreign, transfer and honor students. EMU has a number of rooms and apartments specially adapted for handicapped students.
- * The student government at the U. of Washington offered a $500 prize in a contest to design a new logo to be used on the group's literature. But all 25 entries were rejected as inappropriate. A similar contest at the U. of Oklahoma yielded an acceptable new logo and cost the SG only $50.
- * The Indiana U. student government will have a computer terminal installed in their office on a trial basis this fall. Through an acoustic coupler, the terminal can be connected with a large IU computer. Some possible uses for the hook-up include: accounting, keeping track of student meeting room reservations, book exchange information and storing listings for a car pool and babysitter referral service.
- * In a marketing survey of what freshmen college girls purchase before going off to school in the fall, panty hose beat out blue jeans as the item purchased by the largest percentage of girls. Stuffed animals must be "in" this year; nearly 20% of the new freshmen girls either purchased one or received one as a gift. The survey is available from "Seventeen" magazine. The Occidental College Mortar Board chapter maintains a student "Skills Bank" in the library. Students listed in the card file have skills or interests they are willing to share with other students. The nation's largest intramural program is at Brigham Young U. Last year the program fielded 400 flag football teams and 200 coed basketball teams. The Yale Law School has discovered that women alums donate money to Yale at a higher rate than men. The Educational Testing Service is testing a universal "educational passport" which would contain grade transcripts, work experience, references and other information on a single sheet of microfiche. Local news media in Beaver Falls, Pa. are trying to verify allegations by students of Geneva College there that the strict, religious school maintains secret dossiers on students and has a system of student spys. A student service organization at Ohio State U. has produced a set of braille maps of the campus for blind students. The maps are detailed, yet small enough to carry and inexpensive to produce. A researcher who helped the students design the masters for the maps says that before, blind students knew only a building, a door and a room. Now they have an overall picture of the campus, including details of grassy areas, hazards and building and street names and locations. Eighty-two percent of 1972 college graduates received satisfactory job offers. By field of study, figures ranged from 98% for female nursing grads to 21% for male drama majors, according to a nationwide survey by the American Council on Education. A $2.5-million libel suit has been filed against the Ohio U. student newspaper by the OU personnel director. The suit arises over an article about the administrator's alleged attempts to discredit organizers of a student workers union. Liquor will be allowed in dorm rooms of the U. of Wisconsin system beginning this month. Beer has been permitted in dorms for several years.

STUDENT UNIONIZATION, A CONCEPT MUCH discussed among student leaders during the past few years, will get its first real test in the coming school year at the U. of Massachusetts.

The Student Organizing Project there is not signing up members yet. But it is well financed and a competent full-time staff of four has been spending the summer developing the resources necessary to introduce the concept of student collective bargaining when school begins in the fall. SOP also hopes to serve as a working model for unions on other campuses.

SOP's goal is to bargain in behalf of students and ultimately to secure a contract with U. administration. The contract could cover such areas as tuition, academic requirements, student services, use of funds and virtually any other issue in which students have an interest, say SOP organizers.

Doug Phelps, an SOP staffer this summer, a Harvard Law student and a board member of the National Student Association, says the union would "enable students to bargain collectively for their contract with the university rather than simply accepting the implied contract that all students have with the school they attend. Then this power would be used to preserve student rights, gain more control over their education and their lives outside the classroom and also respond to faculty collective bargaining."

The union will work in parallel with student government, not replace it, according to Nesta King, another full-time SOP staff member and former NSA Board member. "In fact one of the things written into the contract with the administration might be certain guarantees for student government just as faculty union contracts assure specific rules for faculty senates."

The U. of M. student government is sponsoring SOP, at least for the first year. The union has a budget of $50,000, funded through student government, which eliminates the pressure to sign up dues-paying members. In the fall, SOP will concentrate on a campaign to "educate" students about the potential of the organization. A membership recruitment drive will come later. The student union organizers are realistic about the probable length of time necessary to gain recognition from the administration.

"We're working now on setting up a student credit union," says Ms. King. "We plan to establish other economic cooperatives and services so students have a concrete, immediate benefit in joining."

Phelps has corresponded with a number of labor unions and is studying their constitutions. He says, "SOP will be structured just like most other unions. We'll be a democratic, voluntary association."

SOP will be an organization to watch during the coming year. Their acceptance will be a good indication of the viability of the concept of student collective bargaining.

"SOUND SNATCHES," AN ADVERTISING VEHICLE for introducing new record releases is expected to hit the market early this fall. The concept entails inserting disposable "Sound Sheets" in selected magazines. The ten-minute recording will carry excerpts from eight or ten different new releases. At first, the medium is likely to be directed at the lucrative record-buying youth market. Carl Vann, the concept's promoter, says it can also be used to sell any product through what he calls a "combination of the appeals of both radio and the printed media."

"Sound Snatches" will use a paper disc rather than the familiar plastic, Vann says. The advantage to a paper recording is that it deteriorates after several playings. If a listener wants more, he must head for the store and buy the record.

A COURT INJUNCTION IS BEING SOUGHT BY State U. of New York-Stony Brook students which would require the U. to allow married students with children to live in campus dormitories.

The U. presently has a rule against the practice claiming that the dorms were not designed with the safety of small children in mind.

EVALUATIONS OF PROFESSORS BY STUDENTS MAY be "worse than useless" according to a U. of South Florida professor.

Last year in four sections of his psychology course Dr. Robert W. Powell did some analysis of factors such as amount learned, stringency of grading and students' evaluations of him. He summarizes his findings by saying, "I receive much higher evaluations from students when they are required to do less work, receive higher grades and learn substantially less."

To test the amount learned, Dr. Powell gave a test on the first day of class, then repeated the material in the final exam. He found that in the one section in which he employed a "lenient" grading policy, students gave him a high rating but learned significantly less. The students in the three other sections were graded on a stricter policy and they learned more but gave the professor a lower evaluation.

A copy of Dr. Powell's commentary, "Playing the Student Evaluation Game: or, How to Succeed by Not Really Trying," is available to interested NOCR subscribers by writing him at the Psychology Dept., USF, Tampa, Fla. 33620.

AFTER A TWO-YEAR COURT BATTLE, THE 1972 edition of "Images," a U. of Mississippi student literary magazine, was released from the U. print shop.

When the publication was first submitted for printing, the U. balked, objecting to four letter words used in an article about black pride and interracial love.

The court ruled that the U. is an extension of the state, not a private publisher, and therefore cannot exert censorship of the publication. However, the U. was allowed to stamp a disclaimer of responsibility on the inside cover.

ANOTHER STUDENT-OPERATED SERVICES CORPORATION is in serious financial difficulty. The Student Association Student Services, Inc. (SASS) at Ball State U. (Muncie, Ind.) was several months in arrears on rent for their retail store when the building's owner padlocked the doors last month. The corporation reportedly has numerous other debts, including several thousand dollars owed to University Programs Corporation, suppliers of small refrigerators which SASS rents to students.

Meanwhile, as reported last month, the NSA store at the U. of Wisconsin-Madison filed for bankruptcy listing debts of over $82,000. Their assets totaled $20,570, but that included some merchandise which was repossessed by suppliers and a claim for $6,000 from a "Dennis J. Stevens, address unknown," who allegedly disappeared with the proceeds of a canceled charter flight. Although the store was an entity separate from the Wisconsin Student Association and was located several blocks from campus, the store managed to incur $976 in unpaid telephone charges to the UW.

"NUTSHELL" MAGAZINE, TO BE DISTRIBUTED to over a million college students during registration next fall, has a new big sister (or brother).

Approach 13-30 Corporation, publishers of "Nutshell" and several other student-oriented magazines, purchased "Intellectual Digest" last month. The new addition to the Approach 13-30 stable has prestige, 345,000 paid subscribers and gross revenues of about $3,000,000. Its new owners hope to add one missing ingredient, profitability, when publication of the now-dormant "Digest" resumes early next year.

"Knoxville in a Nutshell" was the first publication of Approach 13-30, founded in 1968 by two U. of Tennessee students. The magazine quickly grew into over 100 special city editions. Approach 13-30 also publishes "The Graduate" for college seniors and several other student-oriented, free-distribution publications.

IOWA STATE U. GOT SOME GOOD NEWS AND some bad news last month.

First the bad news: One upper deck of their partially complete $7.4-million stadium addition is tilting and will have to be torn down.

The good news is that the defect was discovered now rather than on a Saturday afternoon next fall. And the contractor, not the university, will foot the bill for rebuilding the structure.

A NEW BUILDING ON THE OHIO STATE U. campus was called "West Campus Building XII" pending the selection of a suitable permanent name. Last month, the OSU Trustees approved a new, official name for the structure. It's now "West Hall."

Until next month, go well, stay well,

JC needs housing

Returning and incoming Santa Rosa Junior College students are in critical need of all types of housing this semester, according to Housing Director Kurt Schweizer.

Schweizer is urging anyone with available housing to contact his office at the college between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. at 527-4244. His office will then post housing information on campus.

ADVISORY COMMISSION ON YOUTH

newsletter

August 1974

Governor Ronald Reagan on March 28, 1974, signed an Executive Order creating the California Advisory Commission on Youth. The Commission will act as an Advisory Council to the State Legislation on matters concerning youth. They were chosen from various geographic, ethnic, and political backgrounds. All of the 15 commissioners and the chairman are under 25.

The Commissioners held their first meeting May 15, 1974, and were sworn in by the Governor. At this time, they set priorities and decided in which youth-oriented area they would work.

On June 21, 22, and 23 the Commissioners met for the second time. At this conference they drafted their by-laws, decided on goals, objectives, and procedures.

The development of more local youth commissions is one of the State Commission's top priorities. Only with support and input from all commissions and youth groups throughout the state can the Commission represent California youth to its fullest capacity.

The purposes of the committees are:

- Legislation Committee - Review and propose legislation concerning youth;
- Juvenile Justice - Conduct studies and propose changes in the juvenile justice system;
- Education - Meet with members of the State Board of Education and Superintendent of Public Instruction on matters regarding the current education system;
- Health - Research areas of sex education, drug abuse, mental and public health;
- Employment - To develop a program to be implemented in the Spring of 1975; to develop better employment opportunities for youth.

The second public meeting of the California State Advisory Commission on Youth will be held at 1:00p.m. August 14, in the Governor's Council Room.

MINUTES

19 August 1974
Meeting #5

I. Call to Order

The meeting was called to order at 11:10A.M. by president Greg Champion.

II. Roll Call

All members were present. Also present were David Herrington (Temporary Student Activities Advisor), Eugene Canevari (our vacationing Student Activities Advisor), Gayle Feldman (Head Songleader) and John Van Skike (Head Cheerleader).

III. Approval of Agenda

The agenda was approved as changed.

IV. Approval of Minutes

The minutes were approved as written.

V. Appointments:

a. Assemblies/Rallies Commissioner - Greg Champion asked for a motion ^{Approv} nominating Tim Crowley for appointment to the position of Assemblies/Rallies Commissioner. Chita Cazares so moved. Bernard Willet seconded it. The motion passed.

b. From the Floor - There were no appointments from the floor.

VI. Reports:

a. From the Floor - Mr. Canevari reported that he was holding up well under his sabbatical.

VII. Old Business:

a. Forensics Medals - Mr. Canevari reported on the medallions for the speech tournaments. Greg Champion ^{asked for a motion} moved that the Executive Cabinet create an accounts payable for the purpose of purchasing medallions for the speech department not to exceed $1,850.00. Crystal Bernard ^{Chita C. so moved} seconded it. There was one abstension. The motion passed.

b. From the Floor - Mr. Canevari reported on the insurance grant for the Associated Students Deans Loan and Grant Fund. Bernard Willet asked about the jumper cables for the police science department. Mr Canevari explained that the district usually supplies them. It was agreed that the Associated Students should ~~provide~~ ^{maintain} this ~~added~~ service ^{for} to students on campus.

VIII. New Business:

a. Area Student Officer Conference/Seminar - Steve Hemphill reported on the Area Student Officer Conference/Seminar to be held at Grossmont College, El Cajon, Ca. October 17, 18, and 19. He asked that the cabinet consider attending the conference as it will be an opportunity to exchange ideas and/or problems with other colleges. Steve will attain costs and agendas for the conference as well as write schools who have previously attended for their opinions. Mr. Canevari gave background information about Calif. Community College Student Government Association (C.C.C.S.G.A.) and announced the conference to be held at San Francisco on Oct. 10. There will also be an Area 6 conference in DeAnza for areas 6 & 7 on Sept. 21.

b. From the Floor:

Teacher Evaluations - Bernard Willet asked that the Teacher Evaluation booklets be made available during registration with a competent person to explain their use. Chita Cazares moved to set up a table in front of the coop with at least three copies manned by Bernard Willet. Bernard Willet seconded it. There were two abstentions. The motion passed. Chita objected to Mr. Canevari's statement questioning the value of the teacher evaluations.

Mr. Canevari asked that the Executive Cabinet authorize the printing of additional Band t-shirts or arrange to have them printed and put on consignment in the bookstore. Chita Cazares move to reject the idea. Bernard Willet seconded it. The motion passed.

IX. Announcements:

Greg Champion announced the S.R.T. final performances of:

1948 SRJC student body chief running again in SR

By PETE GOLIS

Jerome Waldie walked by the scene of one of his earliest campaign successes yesterday and talked about his more recent political activities.

The 1948 student body president at Santa Rosa Junior College insisted he still has an excellent chance to win the Democratic nomination for Governor, and predicted the House would agree with his resolution to impeach President Nixon.

Waldie, who has walked a good portion of California in his gubernatorial campaign, made tracks yesterday along Mendocino Avenue and Steele Lane.

He was joined by a small band of sign-carrying supporters.

The candidate waved at passing cars and greeted other pedestrians during the brisk hour and 15 minute walk. Earlier he walked through Petaluma.

Waldie, a member of the House Judiciary Committee hearing impeachment charges, predicted the Committee will approve the impeachment resolution by a "substantial majority" and the full House will agree.

Whether the Senate convicts the President will depend on the mood of the country and the size of the House majority, he said.

A bearded man, between bites on a taco, said he thought the Congress should "get on with it."

"Everybody except the President agrees," said the Contra Costa Congressman. "The President just hasn't ever cooperated."

"Do you know something we do not know?" wondered a woman.

"No," Waldie said. Testimony taken in closed committee sessions had been heard before or has since been leaked to the press.

Waldie said there's a "good chance" the committee will agree with his view that hearings should be open, now that the White House has also called for open meetings.

"My own view is that we ought not to do anything of this nature behind closed doors," he told questioners.

Waldie said he doesn't want the President to resign.

He called "nonsense" the view Congressmen should remain silent on impeachment until a formal presentation of the evidence.

He said he would vote impeachment unless the President produces substantial new evidence in his defense.

Waldie also said polls showing him fifth among Democratic gubernatorial candidates are wrong.

There is apathy, and most Democratic voters still haven't decided, he said.

The race, he said, will be decided in the last ten days.

Waldie was joined by his wife. The couple met while they were students at the junior college.

WILMA SINGER
In New SRJC Post

SRJC names new director

Three times Wilma Singer walked in to register at Santa Rosa Junior College in the fall of 1968. And three times she went home without even looking through the class schedule.

The fourth time she made it but all through that first semester on campus she was "totally disoriented."

"I felt like I could walk out of a class, away from school and no one would ever miss me.

"I understand the fear that there is in older women. I'm sure most women feel at a certain point in their lives after their kids are gone that if they dropped out of the world, no one would care."

This kind of empathy is no doubt one of the reasons Wilma Singer was chosen for the newly created position of women's reentry director at her alma mater.

The job description calls for her to coordinate happenings at the women's center "to make a well rounded program for all women" as well as to recruit older women on campus.

Her recruiting policy is not going to be based on "go to school and get a job" she said. "Times are too tough, and many women can argue that after four years of education they may only wind up with a $400 a month clerical job."

Wilma went back to school when she was 33 years old at the urging of a friend, "who looked at my red, rough hands and asked if all I was doing with my life was the dishes?"

After two years at SRJC she went on to California State College, Sonoma, where she ended up writing her own major for teaching English as a second language. Since graduating she's taught at Empire College, begun day school for Spanish-speaking adults in Windsor and most recently taught seventh grade at Herbert Slater Junior High School.

She and her husband, Mervyn, who operates a feed store in Windsor, have three children, ages, 18, 15 and 13.

Indicating that she speaks from experience, she said, "when a woman goes back to school or gets involved in anything outside of her home, it can hurt others. Your inclination is to feel guilty about being self-centered, that maybe you're asking for too much.

"But if it does mean a lot, then you must insist on it."

On Campus Report

September, 1974

A LAWSUIT CHARGES A FORMER STUDENT BODY resident at the U. of Michigan, Lee Gill, with misuse of nearly $16,000 of student funds. The civil suit was filed last month by the current student body president.

Gill, who resigned last January amid controversy, is believed to have left the state and could not be located to be served with the complaint and summons.

The suit alleges that Gill opened various bank accounts in the name of the UM Student Government, transferred student funds between accounts, and withdrew large sums for personal use. The funds were allegedly transferred without knowledge or approval of other officers and forgery of the Student Government treasurer's signature may have been involved. Gill is also charged with making hundreds of personal telephone calls on Student Government phones and taking Student Government desk.

Student officers say they presently are only interested in obtaining restitution and do not intend to file criminal charges.

THE "ALABAMA BELLE," A PADDLEWHEELER, WAS donated to the U. of Alabama two years ago by a large corporation which had been using the vessel as a party boat. Through financial help from a local business and a foundation, the "Alabama Belle" was renovated and in July she was officially dedicated as the UA showboat. Mrs. George Wallace spoke at the dedication and U. singers and dancers presented the first show.

Last month, the showboat completed a tour of state cities presenting daily shows featuring UA talent. While being towed home from the successful tour, she began taking on water and within minutes the empty "Alabama Belle" sank to the bottom of the 65-foot-deep Black Warrior River.

Divers have reported that the "Alabama Belle" has only minor damage and salvage efforts are being planned.

THE TOTAL LOSS RATE FOR FEDERALLY INSURED student loans has risen from 4.5% in 1972 to 7.2% in 1974, according to Office of Education figures. To help reverse this trend, several courses of action have been implemented or proposed including:

- * Stricter regulation of proprietary schools, whose students are believed to have a much higher default rate than college and university students.
- * Closer auditing and tougher collection efforts before a loan is written off with federal money.
- * A change in bankruptcy laws which would prohibit students from wiping out educational loan obligations through bankruptcy until five years after the loan repayment period has begun. A Business Week report says that bankruptcy now accounts for only about 5% of the losses but it is feared that this escape route may become more popular through publicity.

"THERE WERE A FEW MEAN PEOPLE THERE BUT I don't see this as any sign of a return to violent demonstrations." - Madison, Wis. Police Chief David Couper commenting on an anti-Nixon pardon demonstration which spawned incidents of street fires, bottle throwing, alleged assaults on policemen and an attempt to break down the door of a U. of Wisconsin campus-area McDonald's restaurant.

AT SOME COLLEGES, ALLOCATING STUDENT FEES means deciding whether the new ping pong balls for the recreation area should be the durable double-A grade or the off-brand discount store variety.

At the U. of California in Los Angeles (UCLA), allocating student fees means deciding on the installation of a $4,000 Call Director mini-switchboard phone system for the student government office or effecting change by eliminating individual secretaries for student government officers in favor of a more efficient secretarial pool. Plus a whole lot of other student-controlled allocations adding up to over $9-million annually.

The non-academic fee funds at UCLA come from a $100 per quarter registration fee and an $8.50 per quarter student government fee.

The registration fees (known as reg fees) amount to over $8.5-million and are officially allocated by the chancellor. But the chancellor generally accepts, with only minor revisions, the report of the reg fee committee, made up of thirteen members, eight of whom are students appointed by student government.

The committee begins its task early in the school year by passing out detailed budget request forms to the various divisions such as the Student Health Services ($2,064,000 allocated last year), Communications Board ($170,000), Band ($51,000), Placement and Career Planning Center ($480,000), and the Urban Crisis Fund ($200,000).

The committee's task is complicated by the fact that most divisions also receive funds from other sources. Men's Intercollegiate Athletics, for example, receives $275,000 from reg fees but receives millions of dollars from other revenue. The newly formed Women's Intercollegiate Sports program gets $90,000 from reg fees as well as matching $90,000 from other sources.

The committee works on an "augmentation" basis. That is, they do not delve into the details of every division's budget every year; they concentrate on evaluating requests for increases from the previous year's budget.

In a large report released every June, UCLA's reg fee allocation committee comments on its reasoning in approving or denying budget requests. It also offers tips to the next year's committee.

Committee members are warned not to become bogged down discussing petty details and not to be overly influenced by meticulously prepared documents, for example.

The committee should agree on a rational set of guidelines well in advance of the spring rush of budget requests, says the report.

In spite of the large amount of money available through the reg fees, budgeting is very tight; there are many outstretched palms. The committee urges organizations to pursue any other sources of funding or revenue. The student newspaper was urged to increase classified ad rates, for example. The committee decided to drop direct funding of the UCLA cheerleaders and other "sprit groups." Instead, the committee recommended a 25¢ increase in student basketball ticket prices to cover the $18,000-plus budget of the "spirit groups." (And the committee has enough clout to reasonably expect such a recommendation to be implemented.)

Separate from reg fees is the $8.50 per term student government fee for UCLA students. Although a good portion of this fee is pre-allocated for continuing programs, the amount available for the student government officers to divide among themselves runs well into six figures.

The UCLA student government is a commission form with different officers for each area of activity. They meet annually at a budget retreat and negotiate among themselves for the funds.

The student government president's budget of $53,000 includes such items as support for both the California Student Lobby and the National Student Lobby, information services, judicial boards, and election costs.

Another officer deals with special interest groups and his $7,900 budget is doled out to such groups as the Black Student Union, the veterans organization and the gay students group. The administrative officer ($25,500 budget) pays for the phone system and the secretarial pool.

There is one other student organization at UCLA which controls large sums of money. But this group, the Associated Students of UCLA, presumably doesn't need any support from fees; it is a multi-million dollar enterprise running the bookstore, food services and other campus services.

RECORD AND PIZZA SHOP PROPRIETORS LOVE college students. But what about other retail merchants?

According to a recent study by a South Dakota State U. marketing class, college students do a much larger share of their shopping outside of their county than any other category of resident.

The percentage of students who do more than half their shopping outside of their college community is 38% for gift items and over 60% for both men's and women's clothing, according to the survey. The percentage of regular out-of-town shoppers among students was more than triple the figure for any other category of local resident.

THE USE OF A STUDENT MAILING LIST TO PRO-
e a bank's back-to-school Frisbee toss was ied by the student government at the U. of consin-Stevens Point. Instead, the student ders wrote a set of guidelines for any ure outside uses of the list: 1) establish ommittee to review requests for use of list; 2) announce any proposed use of list in advance in the student newspaper;
give students the opportunity to delete ir names from the list; 4) require that actual mailing be handled by U. employees that there would be no opportunity for un-horized duplicating of the list.

THE IDEA WAS A GOOD ONE: A HOT AIR BAL-n-ist would hover over the Texas Christian campus during "Howdy Week" attracting ention, making announcements over a loud-aker, giving rides, and performing a "cont in the sky" as a finale.
That was last fall. It wasn't the bal-n-ist's fault that the winds were too strong his act. And he even offered to come back the 1974 "Howdy Week" at no cost. TCU took up on his offer and someone even had him n a contract agreeing to repay $1,000 of $3,200 he had already been paid if his failed to come off the second time.
Earlier this summer, the balloonist told "Howdy Week" promoters he was having some ipment problems and would like to postpone repeat performance until "Howdy Week, 5." TCU told him they'd just as soon have money, thank you. The balloonist's $1,000 ck must have been lost in the mail because hasn't yet been received in "Howdy Week" quarters.

OFF-CAMPUS RESIDENTS ARE THE BIGGEST
rs of the student union facilities at iana U. according to a survey released ere last month. Of nearly 2,000 students led while in the union building, 55% sided off campus and 40% of these students
ported using the union five or more times week. Only 20% of residence halls students ronized the union that often.
Union Board members indicated that the gures came as somewhat of a surprise to
em. Union programming has not tradition-ly been directed to the off-campus student,
ey said.
The survey also revealed that 70% of union
trons relied on the student newspaper for formation about union programs while only relied on posters.

ON CAMPUS CAPSULE COURSES:

- * The U. of Missouri-Columbia police force has appointed a full-time crime prevention specialist to work exclusively with students in preventing campus crime.
- * The City U. of New York is establishing the country's first large scale computer-based admissions and vocational counseling program. The data bank will attempt to match individuals with programs offered at city colleges as well as those available through industry, unions and proprietary schools.
- * An American Assn. of State Colleges and Universities survey reveals that perquisites provided to college presidents include residences (74% of those schools repending), cars (62%), entertainment allowances (46%), and maid service (44%).
- * An anonymous Michigan State U. professor claims he filled out his own student evaluation forms rather than distributing them to his class. The professor says he faked the evaluations, which are given official weight by the MSU Academic Council, to prove that they are "nothing but computerized crap."
- * Handicapped persons are the latest group to come under affirmative action regulations. New Dept. of Labor rules require federal contractors to establish a program of recruiting the handicapped.
- * The Commuters Assn. at the U. of Maryland offered students a diversion from the heat and tedium of registration by providing a cold beer vending truck and arranging to have the local fire department spray a mound of foam for students to frolic in.
- * Eight students from the State U. of N.Y. system left early in September to participate in the first U.S.-Russia undergraduate exchange program.
- * 58.5% of all students at four-year colleges are able to make it through the four years, according to an American Council on Education report.
- * Under a proposed amendment to an agriculture appropriations bill, students who are claimed as dependents by parents will no longer be eligible for food stamps, unless, of course, the entire family is.
- * A Washington, D.C TV station, WTTG, sponsors a group of law student volunteers who serve as mediators between consumers and businesspeople. The station provides

- the student-run center with office space, telephones and on-the-air publicity.
- * The U. of Alabama "Crimson/White" calculated the cost of required textbooks for a typical freshman as $57.20 for the first semester.
 - * Eastern Michigan U.'s placement service reports that students earned over $4.5-million from part-time jobs found through the service last year. Average wages there were $1.87 an hour for on-campus jobs and $2.38 an hour off campus.
 - * The campus of defunct Parsons College (Ia.) was purchased last month by the educational movement of the Maharishi Mahesh Yogi.
 - * Purdue U. has installed a real-grass weatherproof playing surface on their football field. Beneath the turf, heating cables, plastic sheeting and pipes are buried. Large pumps can remove up to one inch of rainfall per hour from the field, keeping it from becoming muddy.
 - * The Student Union at Ohio State U. has contracted with four fast food operators to install facilities there. Tiki Hut, Hardee's, Shakey's pizza and McDonald's won the bidding to set up shop in the union. The McDonald's will be a 600-seat restaurant, their largest, and will serve a full menu, not just hamburgers.
 - * A real bargain is found at the U. of Puerto Rico. Their out-of-state tuition and required fees total only $165 for a full academic year.
 - * The West Virginia U. Foundation allocates modest sums to encourage programs that bring students and instructors together outside the classroom. This year 12 faculty members received $200 grants for such projects as field trips, home fireside chats and a weekend retreat.
 - * The city of Madison, Wis. is utilizing ten students to perform housing inspections in the campus area. The student inspectors were given 30 hours of training in building codes but many landlords fear the students will be openly pro-tenant.
 - * A reporter for the student newspaper of Long Beach State College (Calif.) was subpoenaed to testify about a telephone interview he had with a participant in the Wounded Knee occupation. Last month the subpoena was quashed because it was issued without prior approval of the U.S. Attorney General.

Special Report: National Student Assn. Congress

By BILL HAIGHT
Editor, NATIONAL ON-CAMPUS REPORT

The annual Congress of the U.S. National Student Association was held last month in St. Louis. For six days, student delegates attended workshops, voted on resolutions which are supposed to shape the direction of the organization for the coming year, approved a major change in NSA corporate structure, partied, made some new friends (and perhaps enemies) and elected new officers and directors. This was my first Congress and I had only a vague idea of what to expect. Here's how the week went:

SUNDAY, AUGUST 18 - St. Louis's partially elegant, overpriced 1700-room Chase Park-Plaza Hotel strikes me as an unlikely place for the 27th Congress of the U.S. National Student Association. On top of a $100 fee to attend the Congress ($180 for individuals from non-NSA member schools), delegates must pay for their rooms and all meals and otherwise manage to survive for a week in an establishment that has no compunction about charging $3.50 for a standard breakfast or a pitcher price for a single glass of beer.

Hotel executives must have been disappointed if they gave the NSA officers and staff their comfortable suites in expectation of food and beverage business from the delegates. Dirty looks from hotel personnel fail to intimidate the students as they wander past the opera-set crowd in the lobby with six-packs and bagfuls of groceries from a nearby supermarket.

Missouri Senator Thomas Eagleton is the speaker for the opening session at eight PM. He makes brief remarks, then fields questions from the floor. He's been told by a Missouri delegation that affirmative action guidelines have not been enforced and he promises to look into the charges when he gets back to Washington. Other questions on such matters as the grape boycott, the environment, amnesty for former President Nixon and poverty in Africa are answered in a noncommittal manner befitting a senator running for re-election. A young man who has been particularly vocal about giving amnesty to illegal aliens pursues the senator outside the ballroom and again questions him. This time, in private, he gets a straightforward answer: "I deplore exploitation of illegal immigrants, but these people are in violation of U.S. immigration laws and when they're discovered there just isn't any chance of them remaining in the country without penalty." The young man has had the wind taken out of his sails but he looks almost relieved as he thanks the senator and returns to his seat.

I count about 225 people in the audience for the Eagleton address. How does this compare with attendance at previous Congresses, I ask. "This is about normal. There must be about 800 here tonight," I'm told by a delegate who has been to two previous Congresses. Later, I'm told that the official count, including delegates, alternates, workshop leaders, NSA staffers and observers, is 300.

MONDAY, AUGUST 19 - The day, beginning at 10:30, is taken up with panel discussions and meetings of regional delegations. At 4 PM about 30 people attend a question and answer session regarding the NSA budget. One delegate notes that $65,000 of the $127,000 total is used for staff and officer compensation. He requests a breakdown of individual salary figures. "That information is confidential," answers Larry Friedman, the outgoing NSA president.

At the evening plenary (That's a session of the entire body; it's an unwritten NSA rule that simple terms should never be used if more obscure ones can be found.) the delegates vote that all staff salaries and duties be made public by the following night.

The reluctance of the national staff to release salary figures sets off a number of delegates who feel communication and accountability on the part of NSA workers has been deficient. Barbara Jackson, a pre-law junior from Hunter College draws enthusiastic applause when she announces eloquently, "I didn't pay $100 to come here to watch a family play; I came here to participate!" The discussion draws further complaints. "Why is this convention being held in such an expensive place?" another delegate demands. One delegate with tattooed arms that suggest worldly experience tells the group, "I checked out of here after one night and found a place where I don't have to wear a tie to go to the bathroom." Another young man from Tennessee says, "This is a bunch of B.S. We're going home tomorrow!"

The gap widens between first-time delegates who feel left in the dark and the "family" who feel they have carried a difficult load with little compensation during the 51 weeks since the last Congress. The NSA staff is sometimes openly hostile to delegates, whose dues, it is pointed out, actually pay only a small portion of the national budget. Also resented by the "family" are first-time delegates who have taken no initiative to educate themselves about NSA prior to the Congress.

Within the week, this gap will close substantially as the newcomers become "family" and the overall NSA picture becomes more clear to everyone.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 20 - I chat with Larry Friedman, the outgoing president. He's a witty and thoroughly likeable person, as is nearly everyone I have met or will meet here. I wonder to myself why I find that description significant. I guess my stereotype of NSA people didn't include likeability.

Friedman tells me the delegates just don't understand the problems, particularly the money problems, NSA has had. He's contacted more foundations for financial support than any previous NSA president, he says, and yet the $39,000 in grants and contributions he's secured is near an all-time low. He typically gets one of two reactions from foundations, he says. One reaction is extreme skepticism—some even hang up on him. He's forever explaining that NSA has changed in recent years, that some of NSA's past indiscretions, such as not honoring the restricted uses attached to grants by contributors, happened while he was in high school. The other reaction he gets is: "Oh yes, but college students aren't doing anything these days." Now that students are no longer throwing bricks, they're just not visible. They're damned if they do, damned if they don't, it seems.

At the evening plenary the NSA staff announces that they have their own union and that the release of salary information would be a violation of a verbal contract and of labor regulations. This refusal to honor the resolution passed the night before does not help close the newcomer—"family" gap, but the matter is not pushed. The staff reveals that pay is based to some extent on need and number of dependents. I expect the feminists to object to this departure from 'equal pay for equal work' but none do. Drew Olim, NSA's executive director tells me later that he's not a member of the staff union and would reveal his salary "if they really insisted." He says the officer salaries are not confidential; the president and vice president each receive $6,500.

But the big discussion tonight, and another new word learned, is bifurcation. It seems that the IRS has been taking a close look at the activities of NSA and has found numerous violations of NSA's tax-exempt status in the years 1967 through 1970. Legal Stalling has prevented the IRS from yanking the tax exemption but now, NSA attorneys say, it is essential that the association reorganize in a way that will be acceptable to the IRS in the future.

About a year ago the IRS rejected an NSA proposal to bifurcate (split) into two corporations, one a tax-exempt educational and research foundation and the other a non-profit association able to lobby and engage in other political activities but not eligible for tax-deductible donations. The plan was rejected because the IRS saw it as simply a subterfuge with one corporation controlling the other. But during the past year, a compromise bifurcation plan was agreed to by both the IRS and NSA officers. The compromise plan satisfied the IRS that there would be only minimal overlap between the two corporations. The new NSA Foundation would be controlled by a seven-member board composed of no more than three students or present or recent NSA officers.

This compromise bifurcation plan was approved at the Congress, but only after NSA board members expressed displeasure with the officers for not keeping them up-to-date on the new developments during the past year. A minority opinion of the NSA board argued that the compromise plan is unacceptable because it takes control of the NSA Foundation away from NSA, Inc. and away from students in general. This minority faction favored continued legal action in light of the recent revelations of political abuse of IRS powers.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 21 - Another day of generally worthwhile workshops on such subjects as "Business Management for Small College Newspapers," "Funding Alternatives for Lobbies," "Gay Issues for Straight Student Governments," and "Student Collective Bargaining." Delegates have their choice of seven different workshops during each of four workshop time-slots during the day and the more practical, how-to-do workshops are more popular three to one over the more philosophical sessions. Student government people seem to crave new ideas on "student services" that can be offered as evidence of activity by student government as well as a source of revenue. Insurance programs are a staple in this area. NSA itself derives more of its revenue from a life insurance endorsement than from any other single source.

In the late afternoon 20 students meet for a hastily called caucus on student apathy while at the main event of the hour only about 50 delegates and a local TV camera crew show up to hear a "radicalized" former Vietnam POW speak on amnesty.

At the apathy caucus the matter of low student visibility comes up again. One student body president reports, with the seriousness of a junior executive addressing a corporate board meeting, that the streaking fad did more than anything he's seen to bring students together and develop campus spirit. The solution is, I gather, to come up with some gimmick to give students publicity and bring enthusiasm to campus, preferably without the negative connotation of running around without clothes or throwing bricks at cops.

In another meeting room, six thoroughly likeable anarchists are holding their caucus. They tell me they want to belittle the NSA presidency because it's only an ego trip. They plan a dramatic guerrilla-theater presentation to be sprung on the floor of tonight's plenary. Such disruptions are part of the NSA Congress tradition, they tell me.

During the evening session, the anarchists, dressed in CIA-type trenchcoats and carrying squirt-guns, suddenly jump up and pour stage money over the head of NSA President Friedman. The demonstration falls flat.

Several movies are provided to fill in the gaps each day and on three nights, live entertainment follows the conclusion of the session. A folk-country-bluegrass group performs the second night at about 1 AM and is enthusiastically received. Two nights later, a heavy rock band with truckloads of equipment gives it their best to an embarrassingly small and weary group.

Very, very few delegates are here primarily to party. They do party, of course, but they are able to mix business with pleasure by bringing their spirits with them to the various meetings. The best equipped delegation brings a large suitcase filled with fifths of liquor to every meeting. The dope is generally kept discretely confined to individual rooms upstairs. In spite of the vast quantities of booze consumed, conversation generally centers on NSA business both during and after hours. The worst case of alcohol abuse of the Congress occurred when a middle-aged drunk from the hotel bar wandered into the main ballroom and attempted to address the assembled Congress.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 22 - Tonight's plenary agenda lists numerous resolutions for the body to vote on. There's something for everyone. One proposed resolution states: "Whereas..the NSA fails to provide the Students of the U.S. with any tangible and reliable services, etc...Therefore; be it resolved that the NSA be dissolved and file for bankruptcy." Other proposed resolutions—there are over 40 in all—deal with opposition to Rockefeller's confirmation, opposition to high auto insurance rates for young drivers, the establishment of workshops for commuter students at next year's NSA Congress, and the selection of a less expensive location for next summer's Congress.

The first resolution to be debated urges NSA support for the new government of Greece. An objection to considering this resolution is made on the grounds that, according to the NSA Constitution, the organization "shall not take part in any activity which does not affect students in their role as students." The objection is debated and finally voted down, 74 to 50. It is the will of the body, apparently, that virtually any subject is fair game for an NSA resolution.

As the evening wears on, the name of the game is to breeze through as many resolutions as possible before a quorum is lost. The Congress parliamentarian, Bernie Grofman, is a master at keeping things moving. He's had plenty of experience; although his youthful, bespectacled appearance might cause him to be mistaken for a sophomore engineering student, he's really a political science instructor at the State U. of N.Y.—Stony Brook and this is his twelfth NSA Congress. Old-timers recall that once in more turbulent times, Grofman was physically forced from his podium by dissident delegates. But through a set of pre-arranged signals with the sound technician, the podium microphone was cut off and Grofman re-appeared at an activated floor mike to keep the session in order.

At two AM the meeting falls below a quorum. Grofman admonishes delegates to scour the hotel for their missing colleagues and soon a shaky quorum is re-established. Later, Grofman hears a spurt of laughter coming from one delegation during a hand count. In a third-person style which by now has become familiar to all of us he says, "The chair assumes that the laughter means that someone is raising the hand of a sleeping delegate." Shortly thereafter, a quorum is lost again and the meeting is adjourned.

Although the small and sleepy delegation passed or defeated most resolutions by near-unanimous votes and with little or no debate, there are a number of resolutions left to be acted on before the close of the Congress. As an emergency measure, the Friday plenary is rescheduled to begin at 5 PM, two and one half hours early, so that unfinished business can be taken care of in addition to the final night's election of new national officers.

Bob Greene, a columnist for the Chicago Sun-Times is the only other reporter here strictly to cover the Congress. I learn later that his reports dwell on the lack of student activism today compared to the happenings at an NSA Congress four years ago. "Student government leaders are once again harmless, silly little twerps," he writes. He also gives readers in the 112 cities in which his column is syndicated some Congress color: "A woman delegate from the Great Southwest region arrives at the hotel without sufficient funds. Within a day she has begun a career of prostitution; while she is hesitant at first, the encouragement she receives from the male student delegates gives her confidence..."

FRIDAY, AUGUST 23 - This is election day. In the morning, each of the seven geographical area delegations elects two members of the NSA board of directors (called the National Supervisory Board). The candidates, it is stressed, should be certain they have the time and financial resources of their own to attend board meetings and regional conferences during the year.

At seven o'clock, two hours late, the plenary begins. After the first vote for NSA president, the race is narrowed down to three candidates. Kathy Kelly is a former student body president from the U. of Minnesota. Presently she's involved in a sex-discrimination complaint against UM. She's "family," having served a term on the NSA board of directors. Ray Percy, a former student body president from the U. of Tulsa, is also a former NSA board member but he's not solid "family;" he's been severely criticized by other returning delegates for his lack of activity as a board member. He has the endorsement of the Third World caucus. Percy is a contrast to black office-seekers of previous NSA Congresses who demanded and got a commitment from NSA of $50,000 to establish a separate National Association of Black Students. (NSA later reneged.) In fact Percy appears downright humble as he says, "I am here as an imperfect human being who makes mistakes and as a sensitive human being who would like a

to serve NSA for the benefit of all students." Third candidate is a newcomer, Sunny Wise from U.C.L.A. of California in Los Angeles. She's the lone delegate from UCLA and has never been associated with NSA. She was sent to the Congress to evaluate NSA for UCLA, which hasn't been active in NSA in many years. When first nominated on Wednesday night she declined, then later accepted after she'd had a chance to "make a few phone calls like, 'Hey Mom, would you think if I went to Washington for a year instead of going back to school this fall?'" She is a favorite of other first-time delegates but veterans say that "it just doesn't happen" that a newcomer is elected to a top NSA office. In the second and third ballots, Pearcy gets Third support and little more; Wise gets newcomer support and little more and Kelly gets all the rest. She is elected NSA president. The other top NSA candidate also gets a female as the ambitious Wise runs out Pearcy on the third ballot of the vice presidential race.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 24 - On the plane back to Madison we have a chance to reflect on what I've observed during the week. Just what is NSA? Is it some big government in the sky? No, although many first-time delegates expected that. Is it, as NSA literature suggests, the national organization of students in the U.S.? No. The small participation in the Congress, the limited scope of influence during the year, and the lack of uniform recognition by various strong state student organizations indicates that whatever NSA has been or will be it is not today the voice of American students. Is it a central clearinghouse for a variety of activities relating to students? Apparently it would seem to be but it has missed the boat in a couple of important areas. The National Entertainment Conference and the National Student Lobby, both younger organizations, have surpassed NSA in their specialized areas, for example. Is NSA dying, as some have suggested? No, again. There are probably always will be enough capable and dedicated people around to keep it alive. But the coming year probably won't see any spectacular advances in NSA's power or prestige. Implementing a new bifurcated structure will undoubtedly take a large portion of NSA's resources between now and the 28th Congress.

Is NSA a worthwhile endeavor? "Well," I speculate, either just before or just after I drift off into a deep nap prior to landing, "what if every college in the country would set aside a couple hundred dollars next year to send just one delegate to the NSA Congress as an evaluator?" I'd better make plans to be there because if somehow that happened, it would pass anything ever seen before in the country in the way of amassing student leadership and furthering intercollegiate student communication. I wouldn't want to miss it.

OVER 500 NOTRE DAME STUDENTS WILL BOARD three chartered jets this fall for their annual senior class trip. This year, the trip will be a six-day Thanksgiving holiday in Los Angeles. The highlight of the trip for the always-spirited Irishmen is expected to be the football game with the U.C. Southern California, one of Notre Dame's many "traditional rivals." Fourteen chartered buses and a fleet of 130 rented cars will round out the logistic details on each end of the trip.

Meanwhile, back on campus, those left behind will probably still be brooding about the new crackdown on drinking in the dorms. Students have been warned that ND will not tolerate underage drinking on campus (the drinking age is 21 in Indiana) and that the U. may impose $50 fines on violators.

To make matters worse, the "Senior Bar" was closed down this year because the Alumni Association, which has legal responsibility for the bar, felt they were losing control of the establishment.

It has even been suggested that the student government there provide weekend chartered buses to nearby Michigan night-spots, where the drinking age is 18.

OVER 338,000 MAGAZINE SUBSCRIPTIONS WERE sold last year through a campus bookstore subscription promotion run through the National Association of College Stores. The sales earned commissions of nearly $600,000 for the bookstores and their association.

The subscriptions are sold through a colorful card distributed in the bookstore or stuffed in textbooks. Like the numerous other subscription cards distributed by campus representatives, most major magazines are offered.

In a fact sheet distributed to campus store managers, the subscription agency working with the NACS on the promotion, says that about one card per student should be distributed at the beginning of each term. A return of just over 2% is the national average, he says. That would indicate that about 17 million of the cards were distributed in 1973.

Bookstore managers are urged to stuff the cards in freshmen and sophomore level books because "you'll find your younger students buy the most magazines."

IN THIS ERA OF CONSUMERISM, NO ONE IS immune from the rules.

The student government at the U. of Mississippi had to drop their emergency student loan program when it was discovered that the interest rates charged were in violation of state usury laws. The program, established last year, provided short-term loans up to $30. But the small charge for the service, someone calculated, amounted to an annual interest rate of over 63%.

The editor of the student newspaper at South Dakota State U. attacked a U. student health insurance plan when he discovered it is in apparent violation of Federal Trade Commission rules. Students there are automatically charged for the insurance unless they return a waiver card. The editor pointed out that the plan has the earmarks of a negative option sales plan but doesn't conform to FTC rules for such plans.

And the director of the student Consumer Relations Bureau at Kansas State U. assailed the KSU athletic department for unethical practices in an advertising campaign for season football tickets. The ticket promotion advertised "free" tickets, but actually the tickets were sold at the regular price and buyers also received a "booster" coupon book. The coupons, the ad claimed, would save a fan more than double the cost of the tickets when used for discounts at local merchants. But the use of the word "free" in this case was in violation of FTC guidelines, the consumer watchdog said. Furthermore, she claimed, if a fan used every coupon he or she would need to spend over $150 and still the saving wouldn't reach the figure claimed in the ad.

A NEW MEXICO JUDGE SEES A PARALLEL BETWEEN municipal zoning ordinances and university dorm visitation regulations.

In dismissing a suit filed by a group of students against New Mexico State U., the judge cited the Village of Bella Terre case in which the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that municipalities do not violate the Constitution by prohibiting certain living arrangements such as communes.

The New Mexico case charged that U. regulations prohibiting dorm visitation by members of opposite sexes are unconstitutional because they impair "freedom of movement and association."

AN INDIANA U. STUDENT WAS ARRESTED LAST month and charged with theft by deception, a felony, after IU officials discovered he had obtained a federal loan for summer session but had not enrolled. The student allegedly pulled the same trick last summer.

The U. is making an extensive check of enrollment and loan records for the past year to see if any other such instances have taken place. The deception is accomplished by a student slipping out of the registration line after receiving the loan check but before paying tuition. IU officials say they are responsible for the proper administration of federal loans and alleged violators will be turned over to county prosecutors.

THE "GENERATION GAP" WAS TESTED THIS summer through a U. of Oregon survey of freshmen and parents attending an early registration and orientation program. The biggest gap was found on the question of unrestricted dorm visiting hours for members of the opposite sex; 69% of the freshmen were in favor of visitation while 72% of parents objected.

Seventy-two per cent of the students disagreed that parents should receive grade reports even if the student objects while 50% of the parents favored automatic access to their students' grades.

Eighty-two per cent of the freshmen and 66% of the parents agreed that students should have access to birth control information through the Student Health Center.

Students found guilty of marijuana possession should not be suspended from the U. according to 69% of the students and 49% of the parents polled.

AFTER FORMER ILLINOIS GOVERNOR OTTO KERNER was convicted of tax evasion and bribery, the Northwestern Law School began having difficulty keeping his photograph hanging in place among photos of other prominent NU grads. After being turned upside down or hidden several times, the photograph was permanently retired by administrators. The school had similar problems with the photo of cantankerous Judge Julius Hoffman during the "Chicago Seven" trial.

But one administrator there thinks NU's problems are small compared to the embarrassment other law schools around the country must be experiencing. "At least none of the Watergate people were Northwestern alums," he says proudly.

Until next month, go well, stay well,

SUMMARY OF SURVEY OF STUDENT ROLE IN COLLEGE DECISION-MAKING AND GOVERNANCE
September 12, 1974

The questionnaire was sent out to 90 California Community Colleges and 79 colleges responded to the survey. The sample is adequate to provide a representative cross-section of the practices of student involvement in governance and policy development. Please see attached table and graph.

Table I shows the types of committees on which students are active and possess voting rights. The committees on which students participate most widely are Scholarship, Commencement, Curriculum, the Selection of Commencement Speakers, and on Administrative Committees.

The student voice is accepted the least by the faculty, as shown by low representation on the Faculty Senate, Textbook Selection, and in the Budget-Making process.

The 79 returned reported 91 major policy changes were initiated through student influences and some of them are as follows:

- A. Student Rights and Regulations
- B. Curriculum
- C. College Calendar
- D. Commencement
- E. Facility Planning
- F. Faculty Regulations
- G. Course Credit
- H. Grading System
- I. Health Services
- J. Registration Procedures
- K. Bookstore
- L. Library
- M. Graduation Requirements
- N. Affirmative Action
- O. Financial Aid
- P. Budget
- Q. Food Services
- R. Fees
- S. College Newspaper
- T. Class Schedule
- U. Special Services
 - 1. District support of student conference travel
 - 2. Child care
 - 3. Legal services
 - 4. Adopted recommendations regarding financial aid and emergency loans
 - 5. School vehicles for student activities
 - 6. Campus traffic regulations
 - 7. Student center
 - 8. Child development center

The survey also attempted to determine what influence or support faculty contributed to student government. The responses indicated that the faculty members served primarily as club sponsors and as active members with a vote on the student council. Most campuses reported difficulty in getting faculty to accept responsibilities beyond the classroom.

Meeting #1
Sept. 16, 1974

I. Call to Order

The meeting was called to order at 3:16P.M. by president Greg Champion.

II. Roll Call

The following were present: Greg Champion (Pres.), Barnard Willet (Exec. Vice Pres.), Crystal Barnard (Vice Pres.), Nancy Steele (Rec. Sec.), Steve Hemphill (Corres. Sec.), Paul Herreras (Asst. Fin. Comm.), Soph. Reps: Sue Keyes, Lorna MacDonald, Julie Fechter, and Gayle Feldman, Moira Plowman (Women Affairs). Tim Crowley (Assem./Rallies Comm.) was late. Robin Laine and Chita Cazares were absent.

III. Approval of Agenda

The agenda was approved as changed.

IV. Approval of Minutes

The minutes were approved as written.

V. Reports:

- a. C.S.A. Goals - Greg Champion cited the goals of C.S.A. as they were designed last semester.
- b. Upcoming Conferences - Steve Hemphill reported on the following conferences: Grossmont College, San Diego - Oct. 17, 18, and 19; Area 6 & 7, DeAnza - Oct. 21; C.C.C.S.G.C. (Calif. Community College Student Gov't Conference, San Francisco.
- c. Welcome - David Herrington emphasized the importance of all C.S.A. members making themselves known to the student body and educating them of our services.
- d. Waiver Worker Thank-you - April Lynn Williams thanked all who worked at the waiver table during registration.
- e. Political Science 50 & 51 - David Herrington reported that C.S.A. members may receive 1 unit under Pol Sci 51 and those also serving on Exec. Cab. are entitled 2 units. C.S.A. is the lab for Political Science 50.
- f. Saturday's Game - Gayle Feldman reported on the game last Sat. at College of the Redwoods. She encouraged student participation in supporting the games.
- g. Accounts Payable - David Herrington reported that funds under accounts payable are surplus funds from last year's budget.
- h. From the Floor - There was no report from the floor.

VI. Appointments:

- a. From the Floor - There were no appointments from the floor.

VII. Old Business:

- a. Constitutional Changes - David Herrington announced that the constitutional changes will appear on the Oct. 2nd ballot for freshman reps asked the C.S.A. to study them.
- b. Hot Boxes * Paul Herrerias reported on the suggestion boxes headed Tom Ainsworth.
- c. From the Floor - There was no old business from the floor.

VIII. New Business:

- a. C.S.A. Binders - April Williams checked out C.S.A. binders which are to be returned at the end of the semester.
- b. Sophomore Representative to Exec. Cab. - Sue Keyes was elected by C.S.A. to be the representative to the Executive Cabinet.
- c. Homecoming - David Herrington asked the C.S.A. to consider possible for S.R.J.C. Homecoming to be planned with alumni.
- d. From the Floor - David Herrington explained the philosophy underlying student activities, which is to become informed about student needs and concerns, ways student gov't can meet these needs, and then educate the students of them. Pol. Sci 30 (Parliamentary Procedures) is designed to outline this philosophy and support C.S.A.

Dear David,

Our foreign students were very grateful for the assistance given them running the gamut of registration.

Please extend my thanks to Sandy, Steve, and Mike for their help. And a "thank you" to you, too, David.

Sincerely,

Marie Francescutti

Organized Chaos

STAFF WRITER

President: The minutes of last week's meeting have been read and approved, and today's agenda has been amended and approved. The floor is now open for discussion regarding the first item on the agenda.

D.C.: Madame President, I would like to suggest that we agree to disagree with what the executive cabinet has decided to do concerning this matter. I would like to suggest, further, that we draw up a motion of our own and pass it out to the students.

B.R.: Point of order. Point of order. Before discussing the motion I would like to suggest that we amend it.

M.H.: Point of parliamentary procedure. I would like to make an amendment to the amendment so that I may understand the motion. I must be really slow or something because I still haven't realized what it is that we are discussing.

G.C.: I have the solution to all of your problems. If you will only take a look at what I have diagrammed on the blackboard, you will see that the motion is concerned with stopping from table one to table two or with eliminating the tables and taking care of the procedure beforehand.

B.R.: Point of order or parliamentary procedure (however that goes). Is that how you say it G.C.? I want to be sure that I'm doing this right.

Pres.: Get on with it B.R.

B.R.: I would like to suggest a roll call vote in order to establish whether or not we have a quorum.

G.C.: Excuse me Madame President, I may have just made my first mistake for the day. We do have to have members present in order to conduct a meeting.

M.H.: Point of parliamentary procedure. Madame President, as parliamentarian I should be the one to verify whether G.C. is right or not. G.C., you're wrong.

G.C.: I realize that. I think that now we should take a vote.

D.O.: I am sure that we would all be glad to have a roll call vote on this motion as soon as we understand what it is that we are voting on. I would also like to suggest, furthermore and also, that we vote on whether or not we are going to vote immediately or right now.

B.H.: Let's take a vote. Now we will see who is just a lackey of the administration and who is concerned with justice in our government.

G.C.: I would like everybody to stand up and be counted so that we may all vote yes on my project (whoops, I mean vote on this motion). I would also like to encourage you to vote no on this matter and to vote down D.C.'s motion because if you vote his motion in, you will be waiving our right to use tables.

Pres.: I would like to suggest, at this point, that we take a two minute break and vote on the motion when we return.

TEN MINUTES LATER

F.S.: I would like to suggest that now that we have returned from our break we take another one. I would like to go out for some coffee and a roll.

1st Member: Yeah I'm for that. Let's adjourn for coffee.

2nd Member: Far out. That sounds fine to me, too. I really don't know what it was that we were supposed to be voting on anyway. Do you?

1st Member: No, but I like being on this committee. I think it's just fun to shout and argue like the grown-ups do.

President: God help us. Meeting adjourned.

 RE: Orders for College Catalogs

It's that time again! Please let me know which college catalogs you would like to receive for this next year. Please keep in mind the fact that some catalogs are two-year catalogs, so we won't be getting new copies from some colleges. Also, often we can't get the full number of catalogs that we request and have to distribute those received the best we can.

PLEASE RETURN THIS ORDER TO ME BY MARCH 8. Thank you.

I. Call to Order

The meeting was called to order at 3:02P.M. by president Greg Champion.

II. Roll Call

Nancy Steele, Bernard Willett, Steve Hemphill, and Chita Cazares were absent.

III. Appointments:

a. Commissioners - Crystal Bernard moved to approve the appointments of Jerry McBride (Elections Commissioner) and David Hastings (Publicity Commissioner). Paul Herrerias seconded it. It passed.

IV. Adjournment

The meeting adjourned at 3:05P.M.

Dear Student:

According to our records, you are on probation for the Fall Semester, 1974. This probation signifies that your past academic record (high school or college) is below a C average and that you will need to bring up your grades within a certain period of time. Please see Santa Rosa Junior College catalog, 1973-75, on page 24.

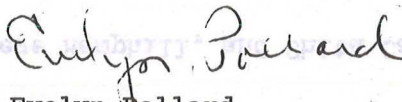

We would like to recommend several things to you. First, after school begins, that you seek the assistance of one of our full-time counselors, who will discuss possible reasons for academic problems and ways to overcome them. The counselors and their office numbers are listed below.

Guidance 60 is a one-unit course specially designed for students on probation. In this course counselors will work informally with small groups to analyze the factors that cause low grades. We hope that you will accept this opportunity and will sign up for Guidance 60 at a time that fits into your fall schedule.

Possibly you have been undecided about your plans and goals and this indecision has been one of the reasons for your low grades. Guidance 61 is a two-unit course designed for self-appraisal, career selection and educational planning.

We look forward to working with you and hope that the coming semester will be a profitable one for you.

Sincerely yours,

Evelyn Pollar

X. Adjournment

Dear Student:

According to our records, you are on probation for the Fall Semester, 1974. This probation signifies that your past academic record (high school or college) is below a C average and that you will need to bring up your grades within a certain period of time. Please see Santa Rosa Junior College catalog, 1973-75, on page 24.

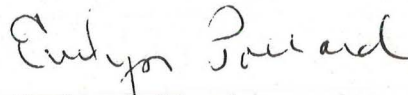

We would like to recommend several things to you. First, after school begins, that you seek the assistance of one of our full-time counselors, who will discuss possible reasons for academic problems and ways to overcome them. The counselors and their office numbers are listed below.

Guidance 60 is a one-unit course specially designed for students on probation. In this course counselors will work informally with small groups to analyze the factors that cause low grades. We hope that you will accept this opportunity and will sign up for Guidance 60 at a time that fits into your fall schedule.

Possibly you have been undecided about your plans and goals and this indecision has been one of the reasons for your low grades. Guidance 61 is a two-unit course designed for self-appraisal, career selection and educational planning.

We look forward to working with you and hope that the coming semester will be a profitable one for you.

Sincerely yours,

Evelyn Pollard
