1. All salaries in Column I will remain the same.
2. After employment in a department and with a satisfactory employment, student employee would shift to Column II.
3. Salaries would reflect an increase of 12% over current Column II established in 1979 through July, 1982).

THE PRESS 7C
DEMOCRAT

Chasing after support for SRJC

By JOHN ADAMS

With Santa Rosa Junior College dodging everything from state and federal budget cuts to the outstretched hands of other institutions, one may wonder why President-Superintendent Roy Mikalson makes so many trips to Sacramento and to presidents' meetings.

In fact, one might ask why he doesn't stay home to protect the college district.

From his reports at monthly trustee meetings, it would appear Mikalson is never on campus. Lately, that's about right. It's a good thing he's a runner.

Mikalson is on the road to the state capitol and at meetings with other community college officials so often because he's charged with carrying the fight for SRJC's survival.

Admittedly, he isn't able to dodge all the budget cuts, though his record and that of the board of trustees, faculty, staff, and students has managed to keep the college in the black thus far.

Mikalson's board reports now ring with a constant reminder that school finance is in bad shape and getting worse all the time. From the flavor of his reports and the bleak nature of state and federal funding for education, one soon realizes Mikalson has turned from the battle for dollars to a fight for every penny. The fight is that important.

College financial reserves have become the latest battleground in statewide war for money for education. Community colleges like Santa Rosa — which have varying amounts of reserves built up through wise money management — are being eyed as a potential bailout source by others, some already in a hand-to-mouth existence financially.

Mikalson is among those leading the fight in Sacramento to keep as many reserve dollars as possible at home where they were raised or saved rather than see them disappear through the college system. So far, those reserves have survived while college officials try to earmark them for specific purposes in an effort to protect them permanently.

The fight over reserves may not go on much longer since there is talk the Legislature may require pooling of reserves as part of 1982-83 funding. Mikalson said colleges with reserves so far have dodged the bullet twice, managing to hang on to those valuable dollars despite efforts to divvy them up.

At a recent president's meeting at Asilomar on the Monterey Peninsula, Mikalson said "it was all bad news. In fact, we never finished the bad news."

The college officials talked about reserves, of short funding, of not enough money for education needs, of granting state bailout loans to needy campuses, of funding based only on classes given for credit, and of a desire for equity in funding for all districts.

He also said the presidents talked of maintenance programs, and faced the gloomy prospect that the state may withdraw its contribution that helps make possible campus repairs and other work. They also learned the state may withdraw its funding for capitol outlay — spending for furniture, equipment, and other campus needs.

Mikalson returned from Asilomar only to head for Sacramento where he learned the governor's office doesn't want to wait until next year to begin its budget-cutting, it wants to slice $500 million from this year's budget. That reduction could reach the community colleges.

Mikalson said he finds the cooperation and promises of support by Redwood Empire legislators in Sacramento heartwarming and some consolation.

But, he tells trustees, education — kindergarten through the state universities — will lose an expected 5 percent cost of living increase for the first quarter of 1982-83.

With the possibilities and threats of further losses continuing, Mikalson shows no inclination of giving up his journeys to maintain a financially healthy Santa Rosa Junior College.

In fact, more and more, lately, he's being aided by telephone calls, letters and personal visits to legislators by others of the campus family, trustees and the community.

The junior college can only benefit from all these efforts.

To: The Committee on Reorganization
c/o Dr. Roy Mikalson, President's Office
From: Mariangela Maguire/SRJC College Student Assembly

The members of the College Student Assembly would offer the following comment on the second draft of the proposed administrative reorganization:

1. The college is still in need of a Dean of Instruction to insure both continuity and quality in our programs.
2. Without clarification it is difficult to know what responsibility Mr. Canevari is intended to have if the scholarship program was added to his job description. We would support an improved system for handling scholarships. However, we would need to know the extent of Mr. Canevari's authority.
3. We again urge that the Campus Police be given to an Instructional or Student Services Dean for conduct and discipline matters. Their impact on all segments of the campus goes far beyond that of students in any other occupational or academic program. It is extremely important that all members of the campus know who makes the final determination in situations involving the conduct or discipline of Campus Police.

Overall we still would like to see the campus carefully study our educational goals. What will our priorities be during the fiscally constrained times that we face? Until these issues are settled we can't hope to effectively restructure our administration to meet the needs of the community we serve.

CCCSGA Semi-Annual Conference
April 23 - 25
Los Angeles, California.

1. Participation in the important, worthwhile and meaningful workshops-45 workshops are being offered dealing with such issues such as financial Aid, Legislation, Student Wages, Nation and Local voting issues and Student Services and tution
2. The Conference and Workshops will provide a forum in Exchange for information among the Student Reps.
3. CCCSGA Represents, in the eyes of our legislators, a body representing the concerns of 1½ million students. Last year CCCSGA had no major involvement in Legislation. The anticipated new leaders for 82-83 can be expected to revert to activities we saw in our past experiences, esp. 80-81. This conference provides us with a direction ~~of~~ the leaders of CCCSGA. Some of the issues are mandatory Student Fees, cutbacks in Financial aid, and in important services such as Enabling Services.

This workshop portends to be a productive activity We are fortunate enough in that there is adequate additional funds to inable us to paticipate. Therefore it is requested that if CSA allots funds for this trip, that each member submit six names of students that you feel would qualify to go. The names must be submitted to Mari by Wednesday, April 14. Mari will then go over your recomendations and choose the people most qualified to attend.

Bear in mind that the highest priority should be given to students with experience in CCCSGA , Members of CSA and ICC, and students who have been an active part of the working of Student Gov't.

 Be advised that problems may have to be dealt with during the summer and that some of the members be available during the summer months.

To: SRJC - Board of Trustees
From: Associated Students Wage Committee
Date: April 12, 1982

We, the elected representatives of Santa Rosa Junior College students, request an adjustment to, and an increase in, the present student salary schedule and wages. This request has been approved by the College Student Assembly and the Inter-Club Council.

Student labor is funded by the Sonoma County Junior College District and by the Federal College Work Study program. Santa Rosa Junior College presently employs approximately 1500 students a year with a salary range of $3.35 to $3.55 an hour. The salaries have not changed since January of 1981, which marked the end of the wage program created by the students and Board of Trustees in Spring, 1979. During the academic year, students are allowed to work no more than 20 hours per week.

It is understood that students make up a necessary and integral part of the SRJC work force. It is equally understood that without such labor the college could anticipate a burgeoning payroll restricted to negotiations and contracts leaving little flexibility in assigning general and on-the-job training options for minimal salaries.

Student employees are valuable members of the campus community, performing in essential and often sensitive positions. As contributing members of the college community, student employees have the right to be recognized and rewarded for their efforts in service of Santa Rosa Junior College and the District.

In preparation for the drafting of a proposal, the students have surveyed the seventy Community College districts in order to ascertain the number of students employed, their categories, salary range and evaluation process (if any). Added to the responses are the ADA figures for each district, thereby making comparisons with Santa Rosa Junior College student employment program workable. We have attached, for your perusal, a copy of the survey and the collective responses. In some cases, the colleges provided us with a copy of their student employee evaluation form as well as their student employee handbook.

Presently, Santa Rosa Junior College provides for an increase in salary after the employee has worked in the same department for 500 hours. The increase is $.05 an hour and there is no provision for further increase. The 500 hour figure precludes students from enjoying an earned increase for approximately one academic year (based on the average hours worked per week). Our proposal would recommend that the number of hours worked to achieve an increase would be reduced and contingent on a satisfactory employee evaluation submitted by the employee's supervisor. In the Spring 1979 proposal, a request was made to require a mandatory evaluation once a year. This system was never implemented and would have been inadequate to provide the employee, supervisor and college with the necessary information regarding a performance appraisal designed to assist the employee in performing at a higher level or to to reduce excessive and costly employee turnover. We would like to see an evaluation conducted once a semester. The first evaluation should occur prior to the student notifying the Accounting Office that the prescribed number of hours have been worked to achieve Column II status. The student would be required to show the Accounting Office a satisfactory evaluation from his/her supervisor before the Accounting Office could okay Column II status. The students with the help of the Student Employment Office are presently working up a recommended employee performance evaluation document, to be presented to the Board with the final wage proposal.

Our purpose in increasing wages after a period of time worked is to provide a meaningful incentive to stay on the job and work satisfactorily as well as provide incentive and response in the form of evaluation, thereby providing the student with some idea of how well he/she is meeting the job requirements and thus justifying salary. It is our desire to see that the hard working, high performance employees are rewarded and those employees who are not so desirous of working hard and effectively will not be rewarded. Presently, unless a specific department has created an evaluation form or the student is in the Work Experience program, there is no required employee evaluation for students while there is such a process for all other SRJC employees.

At this time, after surveying most of California's Community College student employment programs and collecting further supportive data, we ask the Board of Trustees to assign one or more Board members to work with us over this next month to formulate a reasonable and productive wage package for student employees.

We recognize and appreciate the consideration given us by the Board of Trustees in past student employee programs and trust that we can look forward to an equally successful program for the 1982-83 year.

editorial

It's about time somebody did something about the coolie wages paid to student employees at SRJC.

The college has student employees over the proverbial barrel. For students relying on bicycles and buses for transportation, the campus is an ideal place to work. For commuting students, on-campus work also cuts down on gas bills.

Students faced with driving to SRJC for classes and then driving back to Sonoma, Guerneville, Healdsburg or Petaluma to go to work may find campus jobs extremely attractive. Even for Santa Rosa students, a walk to the bookstore or financial aid office, as a commute, beats driving to one of the malls, restaurants, or offices scattered across the city.

Students may find that the convenience of campus jobs outweighs the fact that on-campus jobs don't pay as well as off-campus jobs, and decide to take a cut in salary. But we don't think they should have to accept this.

The college should not exploit the needs of students who are short on transportation and long on commutes in order to provide cheap labor. SRJC should make wages and raise scales for on-campus jobs competitive with the off-campus job market. Students aren't the only ones who would benefit from such action; a wage policy competitive with the private sector would bring higher-quality applicants for on-campus jobs.

The new student wage proposal drafted by the ASB is an effort to bring student wages out of the dark ages. At present, students can get a raise after they have put in 500 hours of work — equal to 5 months at 20 hours per week. Under the new proposal, campus workers would still start off at minimum wage.

Most part-time off-campus employees also start out at $3.35 an hour. But almost all off-campus part-timers are eligible for at least a 10 cent to 20 cent raise after 240 work hours — or three months employment. They then again are eligible for raises at regular three month intervals after that. The new proposal asks that students come up for a 5 cent raise after 300 hours (a little over three months) and asks for four successive seniority categories, each requiring a raise for student employees. We think this proposal is an extremely good idea.

For this reason, we paraphrase a famous quote and urge the workers of the campus to unite. A strong show of student support at the May 15 Board meeting might just convince the board to pass the proposal. If student employees really want a bigger paycheck, the May 15 Board meeting is their opportunity to walk into the bosses' office and ask for that raise — en masse.

Club feels like dancing

by Maureen Layne

Christians on Campus will sponsor a Greek Folk Dance on April 2. From 7:30 p.m. to 11:00 p.m., students can learn about some Greek culture at SRJC.

Bob Michaelson is part of the committee that is organizing the upcoming event. He said that this is the first time that Christians on Campus have sponsored a Greek folk dance. "We have had square dances before," said Michaelson. He hopes that the Greek dance will be as successful as past square dances.

Pam Barbes will teach the art of Greek folk dancing on Friday night. In addition to dancing, a student can also enjoy eating authentic Greek refreshments. Michaelson said that Mrs. Bill Pettas, who is of Greek decent, will provide some of the refreshments.

Michaelson then explained that the event is not only for SRJC students. Sonoma State's Christian group has received an invitation to the dance also. He is also welcoming all Christian groups in Santa Rosa to attend the dance.

"It's an outreach effort," said Michaelson. "But it's not going to be anything overwhelming. There's not going to be anybody preaching or anything. We want people to see the fun of finding out about other cultures."

...ege hour for the rest of the semester. "I ...have one for every Monday, Wednesday,
...and Friday of the semester," he said. Col...lege hour is between noon and one on
...those days.

Milioni screens many of the bands before he invites them to perform here.

If he feels the band is suited to the campus, he invites them to perform. And if the band accepts, it is almost certainly not for the money.

"It's the exposure. They get really good exposure. (They get paid) but not very much — between $25 and $50. I have about five or six bands throughout the year who will perform for free," Milioni explained. Because of the exposure the bands get, "they don't lose nothing," he added.

"I started off with the rock'n'roll bands. They're the most interested in performing. Magic City is rock and blues. We got a good country band, the Country Wood Band. I have Harvest Band coming back by popular demand.

True, the bands get a lot of exposure when they perform on campus. But it seems that there must be some other reason for them to take the time to perform. That reason may be Milioni's attitude.

"I love music. I like doing things to help people. I just felt we needed some entertainment every day, not just two times a week. I felt I could do a good job.

"By these bands playing here, if people like them, they'll want to come back again," he said. He explained that if bands want to return, future entertainment commissioners will have an easier time planning noontime entertainment.

"I've only worked in entertainment this semester. I may go for it another semester. It's possible. It depends on if the people want me to come back.

"If there's somebody better than me, and I'm sure there is, I'd leave the way for him or her," Milioni said.

But Milioni isn't all humility. He has strong ideas regarding instructors who schedule classes during college hour.

This is the only time we have for students for a fun time. I can see there has to be a limit on noise, but it (the entertainment) has to be heard. If an instructor doesn't like it, let him move his class," he stated.

Then he softened up and explained that he couldn't take all the praise for the entertainment. "I don't put on the music. The students put it on themselves."

Students worth more?

by Maureen Layne

Working on campus offers many advantages to nearly 1500 SRJC students. Margo "Magoo" Howell is one student who has discovered the convenience of an on-campus job. She has worked in the student bookstore for three years.

"It (working on campus) has definite advantages. The hours are arranged around your schedule, which most jobs won't do for you. You're on campus, so you don't have far to go between school and work. Also, you only have to work about 20 hours a week. I only have one gripe — that's the wages," said Howell.

And that is the major complaint about working on campus — the wages. However, a new proposal may change the current policy about student salaries.

Under the current policy the maximum wage a student can receive is $3.50 an hour. The new proposal asks for an eight percent increase.

Katy Bright, SRJC student trustee, is heading the committee that is drafting the new proposal. She explained that a person wouldn't actually get an increase until he has been working for a certain amount of time. "A new student would still start at $3.35," she said.

She said that now employees fall into four categories. The longer a person works for the school the higher he can advance.

With the new policy, "when you jump to the next category, that's when you receive the eight percent increase (in salary). That comes out to about 30 cents more per hour."

Also under the current policy, a student can make an extra five cents an hour after he has worked for 500 hours. "The proposal asks for that to be decreased to 300 hours," said Bright.

The final part of the policy asks for an evaluation system. "We want to create a mandatory evaluation for student employees who aren't currently part of an established evaluation process," said Bright.

She said that right now, Work Experience students are the only employees who have any form of evaluation. "A work study student isn't required to go through any evaluation."

Bright believes that an evaluation system will decrease the employee turn-over rate. "With an evaluation system, students will know exactly what is expected of them. It will encourage them to stay with the job longer," she said.

Mari Maguire, ASB president, agreed with Bright. She said that an evaluation would motivate the students. Right now, "there is no real incentive for students," said Maguire. "There are some students that run an office, as well as those who aren't doing very well. At this point, no one is winning."

The committee has drawn the proposal but is presently taking it through the proper channels so that it will be put into action for the 1983-84 school year. "It will be presented at the April Board (of Trustees) meeting," said Maguire. She explained that from there, one member of the Board will work with the committee for a month. "Then they will vote at the May Board meeting."

Both Maguire and Bright think that the proposal will pass. "We are very positive about it," said Maguire. "I think that if the proposal is accepted, everybody will benefit from it."

Bright said that Bill Wilber, dean of business services, has helped the committee. "We did a survey that shows that students at other schools comparable to SRJC make more money than those at SRJC," said Bright.

Wilber said that the survey was a success. "Fifty-seven of the 70 surveys we sent out were returned," he said. However, he also added that the administration has not seen the new salary proposal or the results of the survey.

Bright said the faculty and administration received salary increases last year. However, the students did not.

Bright said that "students are paid better off campus." She believes that this new policy is essential. "It is more convenient to work on campus," she admitted. "But that doesn't mean you can't get paid for it."

poor. He wrote to then-President Jimmy Carter that U.S. military aid to the government would worsen conditions in El Salvador and asked for an end to U.S. aid and intervention.

His transformation to activist priest reportedly began when a priest who lived with the poor was murdered by the government.

He started a radio show, said to have been the most popular in the country. The station was repeatedly bombed when he made such statements as, "The people's organizations are the only force capable of resolving the crisis" of El Salvador politics.

On March 23, 1980, he appealed to the nation's soldiers to obey the laws of God and stop killing dissident peasants. The next day he was killed. Twenty people died at his funeral when government forces fired into the crowd.

The bilingual service was sponsored by the Inter-faith Committee of Sonoma County Church Groups and Sonoma County People Against U.S. Intervention in El Salvador. Msgr. Charles Jackson of Resurrection Parish, the Rev. David Franks of United Methodist Service and Ursuline nuns took part. Two Ursuline sisters have been killed in El Salvador.

Corley led a Chant of Hope dedicated to Romero and the others killed in the embattled nation.

The afternoon marchers weren't able to deliver petitions to the office of Rep. Don Clausen, R-Crescent City, but they picked up a couple of additional signatures and some advice from federal officers assigned there by the Federal Protective Service.

"Did they know you were coming?" asked one of the officers assigned to monitor the demonstration. "We were expected," said Bill Mitchell, head of Stop the War Machine at Santa Rosa Junior College.

"Man, we need to teach you about strategy — don't let them know you're coming," advised one of the federal police.

Clausen's office was closed, but the marchers left petitions under the door. A Clausen spokesman said today he had the petitions and they will be given to the congressman.

The petitions ask Clausen to represent the marchers' positions before Congress. Those positions include opposition to: Reagan's proposed budget; military aid to El Salvador; CIA attacks on Nicaragua; chemical, biological and radiological weapons; draft registration; and tax loopholes for corporations and very wealthy individuals.

Archbishop slain in El Salvador

By SOPHIA JENSEN

The second anniversary of the assassination of El Salvador Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero was observed in Santa Rosa Wednesday evening with a memorial prayer service and Mass at St. Eugene's Church and an afternoon march on the federal building.

The Rev. Ricardo Ortiz of El Salvador, who knew the archbishop for 30 years, told the 200 worshippers of the martyred priest's humanity and thoughtfulness in brief remarks translated by the Rev. Jim Corley, who led the service.

Ortiz had worked in Nicaragua for several years and for the last year has been studying political science in Belgium. He is here visiting his sisters.

The priest said because of current conditions in Central America he doesn't know what his duties will be when he returns in about three weeks. He said he couldn't comment on the possible outcome of Sunday's election in El Salvador since he hasn't been there for a year.

The Associated Press reported Wednesday that right-wing El Salvador politicians have warned there may be a coup if there is election fraud.

"The election won't be a solution, but it has to be done," Ortiz said. "Politics is not philosophy, it has to go step by step."

A narrated slide show was presented on Romero's life, illustrating his commitment to the poor and emphasizing his own words. Two weeks before he was shot by a sniper while celebrating Mass, Romero told a journalist, "I do not believe in death without resurrection."

Members of Stop the War Machine, a student club at Santa Rosa Junior College, marched from the campus to the federal building Wednesday to voice concerns to Congressman Don Clausen's office. The two dozen students asked the legislator to support the nuclear freeze initiative and the end of U.S. aid to El Salvador. Clausen aide Gordon Tippitt received the group, recorded their statements, declined to get into a debate and said he would pass their concerns on to his boss.

Proposed cuts may affect handicapped, disabled students and federal agencies, according to educators, may be headed for a collision due to proposed programs affecting disabled and handicapped students at schools like Santa Rosa Junior College. Specifically, California's Department of Finance may run afoul of federal government's Public Law 94-142 and other laws which guarantee equal educational opportunities for all children including the handicapped.

State finance officials are looking for ways to balance their budget. According to Sharon Rivkin, a special education specialist at SRJC, are leaning hard toward cutting $6.5 million from learning services and related programs including programs helping the disabled to maintain their skills into daily life. A deficit exists in the state's special education program causing part of that search.

However, the federal law requires schools to provide education opportunities and programs even for a single student's individualized education program. The state, however, may be able to argue it is not required to fund any one program entirely and, thus, is not violating the federal mandate.

Still, hundreds of disabled students at SRJC and thousands in various programs elsewhere could see those programs cut or eliminated, meaning a cutback or end to their special needs being met or aided.

Rivkin said the cuts were to be discussed at a state hearing last Thursday, but the hearing was postponed apparently due to statewide pressure against the proposed cuts. That pressure, she said, is coming from educators, disabled students and their support organizations, and legislators.

At SRJC, students, teachers and specialists recently held a meeting to organize their objections to the proposed cuts. Since then, letters and telephone calls have been bombarding legislators.

Rivkin, one of four coordinators of SRJC's Learning Skills Program for disabled students, said the cuts could wipe out about a third of the program while also eliminating home-to-school transportation reimbursement for students in the Enabling Services Program and could end the college's Supportive Physical Education Program.

(See CUTS, Page 6)

Cuts

The learning skills program helps learning disabled students with a variety of problems ranging from difficulty in reading, writing, and spelling, to communicating problems caused by such things as head injuries. The program provides tutors for the academic end of college. There are 130 to 150 students receiving help.

Enabling services helps physically disabled students in attending roles along with note-taking, reading, and transportation, while supportive physical education deals with programs helping students build up their bodies through swimming, wheelchair basketball and other activities.

Rivkin said the state cuts also might eliminate two speech and language specialists in the learning skills program, and attendants in the enabling program.

She said the cuts could mean dropping part-time employees, elimination of one-on-one assistance with larger class sizes, and could leave some students unserved.

Overall, Rivkin said about half the 45,000 disabled and other handicapped students attending community colleges could be out of school due to the proposed state cuts. SRJC, she said, receives about $500,000 in state aid for special education, and could lose about $200,000. Most of the loss would be in the area of excess costs for serving the disabled — money for tutors, therapists and aides.

"It's a sad thing that much of the idea of special education could be wiped out since many of the students count on one-to-one instruction," Rivkin said. "We're talking of students who continuously failed in their ability to make it in the world because of poor reading and writing skills, and low self-esteem."

She said there will be no place for many of the students to go if the college program is cut "just as they are beginning to feel good about themselves. They may return to feeling like second-class citizens. Due to the cuts we may be losing a whole segment of the population which could teach us something while being helpful in the world."

Information about the proposed cuts and college programs is available by calling Rivkin at the college, 527-4278.

45 workshops are being offered dealing with such issues such as Financial Aid, Legislation, Student Wages, Nation and Local voting issues and Student Services and tuition.
- 2) The Conference and Workshops will provide a forum in exchange for information among the Student Reps.
- 3) CCCSGA Represents, in the eyes of our legislators, a body representing the concerns of 1½ million students. Last year CCCSGA had no major involvement in Legislation. The anticipated new leaders for 1982-83 can be expected to revert to activities we saw in our past experiences, esp. 1980-81. This conference provides us with a direction of the leaders of CCCSGA. Some of the issues are mandatory Student Fees, cutbacks in Financial Aid, and in important services such as Enabling Services.

This workshop portends to be a productive activity. We are fortunate enough in that there is adequate additional funds to enable us to participate. Therefore it is requested that if CSA allots funds for this trip, and that the members to be sent include: Carmelle Fitzpatrick, Mariangela Maguire, Steve Ward, Lon Fisk, Carmeron Pagter and Andrew Bissonette.

Read rules before visiting soap box

by Lindsay Webb

A new free speech movement has begun, it would seem, as students lunching near the Coop will attest. Being forced to combine sunshine and relaxation with other individuals' views on politics and plights doesn't please all students.

The Hyde Park Code, which governs podium use, guarantees that members of the college community have a forum from which to express their views. The only restriction of the Code is that speakers do not conduct themselves in a "lewd or obscene" fashion.

As to what constitutes lewd or obscene conduct, students discovered a few weeks back that it was not the use of four letter words.

Assistant Dean of Student Services Gene Canevari, who is in charge of supervising the podium, says it would be easier to define obscene gestures or lewd behavior. "Now, if someone started taking their clothes off..."

Canevari would stop a speaker "if it appeared that something physical was about to occur. I don't want to see anyone physically intimidated, whether they are the speaker or in the crowd," he said.

As for lunching students who would rather not be subjected to a tirade of political jargon, what recourse do they have?

"Well, district policy guarantees the exercise of free speech," Canevari said. "Unfortunately, there is nothing in the policy that limits the frequency of that exercise. And I have to admit that I share some sympathy with people who like to sit near the coop and eat their lunch in the sun.

"The easiest way to limit speakers," he went on, "is to walk away. Somebody who is talking to themselves isn't going to last very long."

The most effective way to limit speakers, however, is to alter district policy. Canevari suggests that if students have a proposal, either to move the podium or restrict its activities in some way, they should appear before the College Student Assembly. The assembly meets every Monday at 3:00 p.m. in the Student Activities Office.

Because the Hyde Park Code is a student government measure, students have the right and power to alter it, Canevari said. Though district policy providing for a public forum on campus would remain in effect, SRJC could adopt a workable solution to satisfy the majority of people.

"The student government can alter its own code to accommodate as many people as possible," Canevari said.

older woman leans over the podium, and viciously slashing the air, the tightly clenching the remains of her. "If we are to survive, Europe be destroyed," she shouts at the. Bill Mitchell sits nearby encouraging with shouts and applause. Tony sha sits in the shade waving the inian flag.

m sometimes sorry that the Con-on guarantees free speech. I am es-ly sorry that sometimes people prac-at right at Hyde Park Podium.

en I first heard Mitchell speak a months back, I perceived him as an aged hippie acting out a poor imin-of the 1960's free speakers. Last day, he gathered together a group SRJC student speakers to proclaim t we must "stop the war machine."

A young man ascended the podium d announced that 43 people who posed the ruling government in El Salvador were killed over the weekend. He went on, shouting that American tax dollars are supporting that government.

"I've been to El Salvador. That junta is out," protested an angry observer in the crowd. "Get your facts straight." Mitchell encouraged the person who made the statement in the crowd to take the podium.

He accepted and stepped up to the platform. "Bill Mitchell and these people have said a lot of things. And a lot of it is right," he went on. "But their facts are all wrong."

"Besides, it's fine to stand around and talk about these things, but if we want to change things we have to do something. If we just stand around and talk we're wasting a lot of time. Let's do something!"

"We are doing something," a previous speaker shouted back.

Mitchell stood up and replied, "We can do it by popular vote. We don't have to do it with war."

Some of the things the speakers said on the podium Tuesday were difficult to decipher. The woman who said that all our present and previous problems were caused by the European caste society who created the poisonous blood running through our veins and that Europe must be destroyed, was contradictory at best.

And besides, wasn't she supposed to be speaking out against war?

The speeches were all more emotional than factual. The facts were often blurred or non-existent. More than once I was confused by the speaker's rhetoric, which was reminiscent of the government officials whom they sought to discredit. But, overall, their sentiment was on target — there is a problem, and something must be done.

A few months ago, I was in favor of doing away with Hyde Park Podium. I was sick of being subjected day after day to the same tirade by the same two speakers. I've discovered it was the lack of variety that I objected to most.

Mitchell's "student teach-in" on Tuesday provided the variety that previous podium performances lacked.

American's right to free speech is, indeed, important. And the first step toward any kind of solution is discussion. Hyde Park's and the Constitution's guarantee of free speech assures us that we will at least be aware that there is a problem.

Thank you Bill Mitchell and others for having the guts to get up before many apathetic, and sometimes rude, people (including myself) to express your views, and voice your concern, in the interest of awareness.

SPEAKING OUT AGAINST Israeli policy towards Palestinians in the West Bank, SRJC student Tony Tawasha steps up to Hyde Park on Thursdays to express his opinions.

"There is a curfew in the West Bank. They [Israelis] don't want you [Palestinians] to leave your house. They don't want you to demonstrate. They can check to see if you are at home any time they want. They can search you any time they feel like it. Soldiers walk through the streets carrying military machine guns and grenades. Civilian Jews carry weapons because the government told them to protect themselves. We [Palestinians] are civilians too. If civilian Jews have the right to carry guns, we should have that right too. This is called democracy," Tawasha claimed, hitting his fist on the table.

The young Palestinian went on to explain further the grievances his people hold against the Israelis. "The Palestinians are scared," he said. "The [Israeli] soldiers treat them any way they want.

"I'm peaceful," he said. "I love people. I like to have a good time with people. I love Jesus Christ, and I love God," said the Christian Palestinian. "I want to live in peace in Israel. There should be no government in the Holy Land. Everybody should love everybody else.

"But [Israel], it's a Palestinian state and it should have a Palestinian government. Israelis can live there too in peace under Palestinian rule. You cannot mix Palestine and Israel. Arab government cannot mix with Jewish government," Tawasha said.

Tawasha doesn't believe a reversal of the present situation in Israel would result if Palestinians ruled Israel because "the policy would be much better. Israeli policy sucks."

Would Tawasha be satisfied if the Palestinian people could keep the West Bank as their own country? "Yes, but Jerusalem [outside the West Bank] used to be Palestine and now it's Jewish. Jerusalem is the Palestinian capital. Jerusalem should belong to Palestine.

"In 1946 the Jews and the Arabs together kicked out the British. Then the Jews from Europe came and brought Zionism and the awful mess [of the present] to the people. Zionism destroyed the country and the people. There is too much pressure on us, too much killing," said Tawasha with tears filling his eyes.

Tawasha also intends to speak at Sonoma State University for the Palestinian cause.

New party, SAG, runs into snags

by Teresa Mariani

Six student government candidates who have formed a political party have filed a grievance with Student Activities Assistant Dean Gene Canevari over what one SAG (Students for Active Government) candidate called "a mishandled situation."

The grievance, filed Tuesday, was over an incident which occurred April 14 in the cafeteria. Student Activities Assistant Bob Flores found the group in violation of the SRJC elections code because they were sitting at a table giving away free coffee and encouraging students to sign required election petitions for the candidates in the SAG party.

"He told us we were in violation of the election code, and it was within his authority to disqualify us, and if we didn't disband [the table], he would do so," said SAG candidate Greg Kuypers.

Candidates Kuypers, Ken Meyer, and Robert Mattingly said that Flores told them they were violating an election code regulation [preventing candidates from putting out any form of publicity earlier than two weeks before an actual election] by talking to more than one person from talking to more than one student at a time, as long as candidates approach students and do not create an "open forum" by engaging in any kind of activity that would draw masses of students.

"I told them it had to be a one-on-one thing," said Flores. "And what they constituted that statement to mean was not to talk to more than one student at a time."

"What I meant was that they couldn't stand up on tables and say: 'Hey, I'm a candidate.' They couldn't create a situation that would bring students to them. What they had to do was go to the students."

The incident resulted in notices in the Bear Facts stressing that campaigning could not begin before 5 p.m. April 27 and defined campaigning as "posters, fliers, sandwich boards, buttons, open forums, speeches, and any other activity as defined in the elections and publicity code."

SAG candidates don't feel they were violating the elections code. Calling a petition table and offering free coffee an open forum "is his [Flores'] interpretation that we were in violation of the election code," said Mattingly.

Flores said that the code does not spell out what, exactly, is an open forum, but said that he interpreted it to mean "some vehicle that attracted other students to them."

The letter of grievance filed last Tuesday, "stated that we [SAG] want it on record that we object to the way the matter was handled," said Mattingly.

SAG members think that making a formal complaint to the election board would do no good because "it would go to the CSA, which is completely made up of all the people running against us. I think that's a conflict of interest," said Meyer, an ASB presidential candidate. "That's something we'll have to take care of after we're elected," he joked.

SAG members say they expected opposition from current student government members because of the fact that they formed a political "slate" party.

"We felt that whatever we came up with during the campaign would include

con't on back page

the possibility of being shut down by student government using their interpretation of the codes," Meyer said.

However, after talking with Canevari and Flores this week, "we all feel that we're going to get a fair shake from those two people," Meyers stressed.

SAG members expected the opposition because of their publicly expressed attitudes about present student government at SRJC. "The way I see it is that [student government] is just a tight-knit social group," said Meyer.

"They've put themselves in an ivory tower, and that's where they've stayed," said Kuypers.

The party hopes to change the atmosphere of SRJC's student government. "As a party, we represent a cross-section of the whole campus, with a variety of majors," not just political science majors, said SAG vice-presidential candidate Jennifer McGrew.

SAG members worry that the cafeteria incident may have given the group a bad image. "We're not a group of radical veterans who want to overthrow the CSA," Kuypers stressed, adding that only two candidates, himself and Meyer, were U.S. armed services veterans.

"People have heard that we're just a bunch of radicals."

Dance with future engineers

by Tammie Edwards

"TEC stands for The Engineering Club — pretty catchy, huh," joked Charlie Traboulsi, President of TEC.

"The last time the club was active was in 1970. It has been inactive for 12 years. TEC was a very active club on campus in the past. It died when there was a general lack of interest in engineering in the early '70's," he explained.

Students can see some of the old group's work by looking at the engraved bricks leading from Analy Hall to Pioneer Hall. TEC is already beginning to live up to the earlier club's level of activity.

"We'll sponsor two dances; one off campus with Daddy Please and one on campus with ASB," he said. The Daddy Please dance will be at the Sebastopol Grange on April 30.

The club will also begin to lay the bricks that gave TEC much of its fame.

"Every year the engineering club had a brick in its name. It's a long tradition. We're going to restore that tradition by having a 1982 brick," Traboulsi said. He

"I think we're doing a hell of a lot for a club that's just one semester old," he stated.

"We have 36 members by word of mouth. We hold our meetings at eight on Wednesday mornings. The fact that we have that many people showing up that early in the morning is pretty amazing," Traboulsi explained.

He believes the reason the club is doing so well is because "engineering is one of the boom fields of today."

The club's advisor is Richard Abrams.

"It's open to everybody who's interested in engineering," Traboulsi said. Dues are $5; meetings are in Shuhaw Hall 1715.

To: Gene Canevari, Assistant Dean of Student Services
From: Ken Meyer (Candidate, President) and Gregory Kuypers (Candidate Executive Vice President)
Date: 20 April 1982
Subj: Alleged Violations of Election Codes

On 14 April 1982, the allegations were made that we (the candidates now known as "Students for Active Government") were in violation of the below mentioned sections of the Publicity Code of the Santa Rosa Junior College.

1) Section II, Clause I

"All posters must be approved before posting"

- a. The Poster, "Free Coffee, sponsored by the SRJC Veterans Club", had verbal approval from the student activities office via Robert Mattingly (President Veterans Club) prior to the 14th of April.

2) Section III, Clause VIII

"Other types of publicity for elections Open forum"

- a. We did not feel that this was anymore of an "open forum" than Katie Bright introducing Lori Fisk to a table of 5 - 10 students at a time.

The way the situation was handled by Bob Flores was not conducive to the location (in front of students). We also feel the situation was handled in a less than professional manner.

We the students mentioned above would like to go on record saying "We disagree with the handling of this matter"

We will also rest on the decision made concerning this matter by J. Derickson, Elections Commisioner and Bob Flores, Advisor.

4-4.3 Policy Statement on Speakers, Solicitation of Funds, and Dissemination of Literature on Campus

The policy and procedures stated in the following pages were jointly adopted by the Student Affairs Committee, the Committee for an Open Forum, the Inter-Club Council, the Academic Senate, and the Governing Board.

1. Speaker for a college club or organization:

An invitation, sanctioned by the organization and its advisor, is all that is necessary. This type of presentation is deemed to be similar to a guest speaker in a scheduled class.

2. Off-campus speakers invited to address the student body in an assembly-type program:

The Committee on Arts and Lectures or its designated sub-committee is the agency of the college which has the responsibility of sponsoring assembly-type presentations on controversial issues. The policy and procedures outlined for the former Committee for an Open Forum and made a part of this section will govern such presentations. (See 3-11.2, Committee on Arts and Lectures.)

A student organization may sponsor an off-campus speaker in an assembly-type program if authorization is granted by the Inter-Club Council. Any publicly announced program will fall under the "assembly-type program" category. Approval by the Student Activities Advisor will be sufficient if the Inter-Club Council is unable to act. The policy and procedures governing such presentations and the guidelines for the Inter-Club Council are made a part of this section.

3. A "Hyde Park" Forum for Students and Employees of the District

An appropriate location will be designated and a pre-determined time for presentations (formal or informal) by faculty members, students, administrators, trustees, or members of the classified staff of the college. The "Hyde Park" activities are confined to members of the college community and may include debates, prepared or spontaneous statements or simply informal discussion. Any organization or individual wishing to be assured time for a presentation at the "Hyde Park" may reserve time through the office of the Dean, Student Personnel Services. A statement prepared by the County Counsel, including reminders of "fair play" and libelous, slanderous, or illegal actions will be brought to the attention of users of the facility.

4. Dissemination of Information On Campus:

Every bulletin board on campus will be assigned jointly by the Dean of Student Personnel Services and Instruction to a department, office, organization, or individual or be given an "open" classification. Use of assigned boards will be at the discretion of the assignee. Boards labeled "open" may be used for publicizing on or off campus events of public interest.

Leaflets and similar material may be freely distributed at outdoor areas which are centers of campus life by campus organizations provided the material has recorded on it the campus organization and the names of the individuals who have written the material. Individuals who desire to distribute materials may request an organization's sponsorship through the Inter-Club Council. The sponsoring organization, together with its advisor, may facilitate the distribution of the materials, without necessarily subscribing to the point of view presented, provided the material has recorded on it the name of the campus organization and the names of the individuals who have written the material.

Off-campus groups or individuals presenting approved assembly-type programs may distribute but not sell literature related to the topic under discussion or the purposes of the organization represented. The literature may be distributed at the location from which the program will be presented and/or continued during a question/answer period.

$4 million for SRJC remodeling

Santa Rosa Junior College trustees earmarked more than $4 million for repair and remodeling projects in hopes they won't have to share the district savings with other colleges in the state.

But President Roy Mikalson, who has been among those in California leading the fight to protect reserves, said there can be no guarantee the reserves will be safe until contracts are awarded.

The concern about reserves faces two-year colleges that have saved money for future needs. Several colleges are less fortunate and the state is seeking ways to balance budgets, including the possibility of requiring college districts with large reserves to share their wealth.

The board's transfer of more than $4.3 million included listing a variety of projects to be detailed out for actual construction and repair as soon as possible.

Two remodeling projects, however, Barnett and Shuhaw halls, were not included because of a disagreement over planning priorities.

Students seek pay hike

Santa Rosa Junior College's student body wants better pay for the college's higher-achieving student workers.

Trustee Chris Pedroncelli was appointed to work with the Associated Students in developing a wage package to bring to the board.

Mariangela Maguire, student president, Monday called for an adjustment in student wages which now range from $3.35 to $3.55 an hour.

She said the college employs about 1,500 students a year, allowing them to work 20 hours a week during the academic calendar. The students, she said, make up a vital part of campus labor.

Noting that a raise of five cents an hour is considered after a student has worked 500 hours — about a year on campus — Maguire said the student body's goal is a reward for "hard-working, high-performing students."

The student body feels students should be considered for pay increases sooner than 500 hours of work. Maguire said an evaluation system could be used to decide raises.

ASB grants students money for use on personal projects

by Maureen Layne

Imagine sitting in a tall, wooden chair which has "DIRECTOR" written across its back. Pretend yelling out directions from behind a pair of sunglasses while on location in sunny Southern California.

Cut to SRJC where five students are doing just that. It may not be Hollywood, but they are sitting in the director's chair as they work on their own films.

To help project these people into film making, the Associated Student Body has developed project film grants. Five people will take their grants this semester which are between $50 and $250 and start rolling their films.

Gordon Chaplin is one of five grant recipients trying to splice together a career in the film industry. His $50 grant "went quickly" as he produced his film, "Stages."

It is "a movie on dance and dancers," said Chaplin. "It's basically a flash forward in a little girl's life."

He's working on another film now called "Where Have the Flowers Gone." The 27-year-old said that the first film "was an understanding for my next film."

Lisa Gurian will use her $50 grant to roll into a film which she hopes will premiere on the big screen. "This is going to be an attempt to go out and sell," said Gurian.

Gurian said that she has "done other films and slide shows." But "The Tail of Michael" is her "big release."

Getting the grant to make the film wasn't too difficult, according to Gurian. The future female counter-part of George Lucas said that "the hardest thing is knowing what they (the interviewing committee) want to hear so you can convince them that you need the money."

John Harden, Robert Mannion and Scott Robbins also received film grants. They will receive $50, $75, and $150, respectively, to produce their film projects.

But the ASB didn't give grants to only filmmakers. Margruder Beall, Debra Heidreder and Gail Sayre received grants for individual projects.

Sayre used her $100 "to purchase the tools" to work on mezzotint. "It is a dying art form," said Sayre, explaining mezzotint, a type of engraving in metal plate.

The third semester student hopes to "be quite successful" with her rare art talent. She is keeping her fingers crossed in hopes she will be able to market her art.

Beall plans to use his $250 to work on an audio transducer and Heidreder will make a children's play with her $250.

Dancers do their stuff

by Luisa Fonseca

"Footprints on the Wall" is the name of this year's annual dance concert put on by the students enrolled in dance workshop at SRJC and coordinated by SRJC physical education instructor Marjorie Schultz. Some 18 women will participate in the event held at Tauzer Gym.

The high stepping and pirouetting dancers choreographed their own routines. This year the women show a trend toward large group routines. Only two will dare to take the stage by themselves in solos. Routines will range anywhere from two and a half minutes to a full six.

Each student in the dance workshop was to submit a routine. Schultz then chose those routines she thought were best. Modern, jazz, ballet, and tap, all done to tempo, will spotlight the gym floor.

Only four of the 18 dancers have performed in the dance workshop previously, so a lot of new and perhaps nervous faces await the audience, that in the past has ranged from 200 to 400 people.

According to Schultz, the main problem this year is the large number of dancers participating in more than one sketch and this makes rehearsing difficult trying to coordinate rehearsal times.

Some [women] are in seven or eight," Schultz said.

Schultz doesn't think the mixed rehearsing schedules will adversely affect the performance of this year's dance show because the dancers held a lot of extra practice sessions.

IMPROVISATION MAY BE THE KEY here as these dancers ham it up. These SRJC students will be performing in the upcoming dancer's workshop called "Footprints on the Wall." These 18 women have been studying dance at SRJC and welcome the chance to show off their newly acquired skills in this annual event. The performance will be Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30 p.m. in Tauzer Gym. Tickets are $2 students, $3 general.

...want to get the crowd
... "If you're out there
... sitting there like ...
... under her chin and ... her knee) it's real
... as they continue
... ges to call them back into the gym. The conversation grows louder as they reminisce about their experiences as cheerleaders in high school.

"Do you remember when so and so got in a fight with such and such," the conversation goes. "Yeah, and she won too," someone says. They all laugh.

They are a diverse group, these 12.
Some are quiet and reserved, others are loud and brassy. Most have only known each other since last weekend, but they talk and kid each other like long time friends.

"Do you think they'll call anybody back in? You know, to see them again before they decide?" "Oh God, I hope not," another replies. "That's the worst thing."

"Besides, they didn't like you that much," they laugh.

All the girls have a sense of pride in a reputation and want to build a good name for the school through their cheerleading.

"A good reputation, get everybody active, that's what we want to do," says one girl.

"Yeah, but this isn't like high school, you guys," another responds. "Not everybody sits around waiting for the game that night," she says.

"We should be something that the school can be proud of," someone else adds. "We've got to have good uniforms."

They all laugh at this last bit of vanity.

Finally, they are called back into the gym. They chatter and laugh all the way to the door. They enter in complete silence.

They line up, stiffly, lengthwise across the gym.

"You're all terrific," they are told. "You guys did a great job. You're all winners in our eyes."

The judges call off the names, one by one. After each name there are screams and hugs, and relief for that particular person.

The last name is called off. This girl looks more relieved than happy. The two who didn't make it hug the other girls and exchange congratulations and condolences.

The two walk casually out of the gym alone. The new cheerleaders sit primly for a photograph.

The portable cassette deck is turned on. The music blares. The winners half run, half dance, out of the gymnasium.

SRJC Cub cheerleader try-outs.

ORIGINALLY 20 females signed up for the try-outs, but by Saturday only 12 were still in the competition. Judges picked all but two of the contestants for the 10 member spirit squad.

by Lindsay Webb

A lone girl stands rigidly in the center of Tauzer Gymnasium. She smiles, nervously, just having completed her last routine for the 1982-83 SRJC cheerleading tryouts. The judges look at her and exchange comments between themselves.

At the edge of the gym sits a cluster of girls, whispering and alternately watching the judges and the solitary figure in the center arena.

"All right," someone says noncommittally. The girl's frozen smile now drops as she runs back to the safety of the pack.

"It was great. No, really, it was," one of the girls reassures her.

The group shuffles outside to await their fate — the judges' final decision. They are nervous and keep up a constant stream of chatter.

"I wonder how they're gonna' break the news to us," one says. "I don't even want to know," another replies.

Ten of these girls will win, two will lose. They lament over missed moves, broken opportunities.

"I was awful," a quiet brunette says, mainly to herself. "No you weren't," the girl sitting next to her says, putting her arm around her shoulders.

Most of the girls are 17 and 18-year-olds. One is 19, "and ready for the rocking chair," they chide her. All but two, who are SRJC students, attend high schools around the Santa Rosa area: Montgomery, Analy, Casa Grande, and Point Reyes.

They have given up two weekends worth of time to come to SRJC in an attempt to become the school's cheerleaders for the 1982-83 school year. Initially some 20 girls entered the competition, but the number has dwindled to these 12. The squad will consist of ten girls.

Why do they want to be cheerleaders?

"It's fun," they answer unanimously. "And it's a good way to get involved with school," one offers. "You also meet a lot of people," another adds.

"You get to see all the players up close in their cute little shorts," shoots back another. "No, no, just kidding. Don't write that," she says.

"God, I wish they'd hurry up," a serious looking girl says. "Then again, maybe I don't."

When asked whether they feel a cheerleader's purpose is to entertain the crowd or to spark enthusiasm the group becomes silent for a moment.

"A little of both," comes one reply. The rest nod in agreement.

"And a lot of times no one pays any attention to you, anyway," another girl adds. "It makes you feel good when somebody else joins in."

editorial

Most students consider student government a joke. This seems to be an attitude that is a hangover from high school days when all that student body president did was plan proms and assign committees to make Reynolds Wrap stars to hang from the ceiling of the gym for the Homecoming dance.

As a result of this, ASB officers at SRJC may just have one of the toughest jobs in western civilization. Not only do they have to keep a close eye on the administration to make sure that student interests are protected in all SRJC policies and actions, they also have to convince the SRJC students they represent that they are not just in student government for the purpose of forming a social clique.

Students may not realize it, but the ASB officers, along with the CSA, have control of $100,000 — an enormous sum of money. The ASB metes out over $90,000 to various campus programs annually. Groups as different as the football team, Poppy Creek daycare center, and the theatre arts department receive a good portion of the funds they need in order to exist from the ASB.

All in all, the ASB officers are responsible for the actions and programs which transform this campus from a chunk of dirt with buildings and parking lots scattered between Armory Drive and Mendocino Avenue into a vital, exciting institution which provides for social and aesthetic pursuits in addition to intellectual pursuits.

For these reasons, SRJC students should be aware of the positions and ideals of all the candidates running for office. Though voter turnout in ASB elections has increased over the past two years, the turnout is still embarrassingly low when compared to the number of students who are enrolled at this college, all of whom are eligible to vote.

We urge students to take the two minutes of their time needed to mark their ballots during the ASB elections in the Coop next Wednesday and Thursday. Whatever the disdain that exists toward any type of government in this post-Watergate era, SRJC students must remember that the ASB officers control our money — money earned through selling ASB cards and tickets to athletic events — and through that they control the many activities that make SRJC a very pleasant place to get an education.

Students dare needles & nerves to give

by Maureen Layne

The faces were ghostly white. With their backs pinned against the back of the chairs, nine students awaited their turn. Entering the gym was like entering a mortuary; most of the faces were solemn and sad.

It was the blood drive on April 30 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at SRJC that brought the pale skin to the potential donors.

One student entered through the doors and looked around. His eyes widened as he saw some students lying on the tables with the blood draining from their veins. But his frightened eyes turned to smiling ones as he tried to eliminate his fear of donating blood.

"I've given blood before," he assured himself. "You only get a little weak and dizzy. Besides, if you pass out, you're already lying down."

He had already received the okay about his health from the registered nurse before giving blood. Now, he assumed his position beside the other zombies and awaited the call of one of the draculas, disguised as a registered nurse.

Not everyone can give blood. Charlette "Charlie" Bailey, R.N., said, "We're very careful about taking people to give blood." Bailey explained that the donor must be "basically healthy" in order to give blood. Each nurse takes some medical history of the prospective donor, making sure he hasn't had a recent flu or illness.

"We used to give money to donors. Now it's strictly volunteer. I think that discourages the people from lying about their history [so they could still give blood and make money]," she said.

The basic standards for giving blood are that a person must weigh more than 110 pounds and must not have had any illness in the past two weeks before he/she donates blood.

As the students begin the process before getting to the actual table "we just test for iron. We like high levels of iron, and the person who gets it [the blood] will too," said Bailey.

The registered nurse who works in mobile units throughout Sonoma, Lake and Mendocino counties said, "Most of the time it [getting turned away] has to do with allergies."

She believes that it is very important for students to donate blood. "We can't go down to Long's and buy this. Besides, psychologically it makes you feel good, knowing that you've helped out."

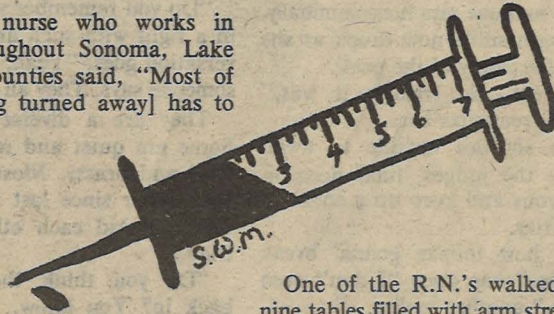

Of course, there have been some problems with donating blood. "Some people do pass out," said one nurse, shrugging her shoulders to indicate that it was nothing unusual. "But it really doesn't hurt."

What about the cemented look of fear that these people have plastered on their faces?

"People are usually apprehensive," said Bailey. "Butterflies we allow; fear we don't."

Just then one of the zombies managed to unglue herself from the chair on death row and make her way over to the "goodie" table. The cookies and orange juice are to "increase the level of sugar in the blood," said Sally Pola. "They eat and drink just before giving blood and right after."

One of the R.N.'s walked over to the nine tables filled with arm stretched bodies. "Ken Meyer," she called out. It was the same person who had reassured himself as he walked into the gym earlier.

He waltzed right up to the table and began to strip off his sweater and his shoes. Rolling up his sleeve he questioned, "I'm left handed. Is this going to bother me?"

"Not as long as you don't plan to play any tennis," assured the nurse.

She wrapped the blood pressure gauge around his arm to use it for a tourniquet.

Soon the veins on the inner part of his elbow began to protrude from under the skin. She prepared the needle.

He began to chatter more rapidly as the nurse placed the disinfectant on his arm. "It's no big deal. Ayeeo —" his eyes dilated and his mouth dropped revealing his tonsils, but only momentarily. A smile quickly returned to his face and he resumed his steady speaking pace.

The red liquid drained from his arm into a small plastic bag as he continued talking. Before long he had given his pint and the nurse came to remove the dreaded needle.

"It usually takes between five and 10 minutes," she explained.

He held his pale arm high in the air to stop the bleeding. The nurse wrapped his arm and he got up.

He headed straight for the "goodie" table. There the nurse instructed him to sit and rest for 10 minutes.

The color began to return to his face as he explained, "You feel good about an hour afterwards. It's like your body generates new blood."

One girl pointed out that the "feeling good" is because "you know you're doing something worthwhile. It might be your blood that keeps someone alive."

SRJC received 102 pints of blood to place in their reserve blood bank. With this blood in reserve at the Sonoma County Community Blood Bank, any SRJC student can get blood when he/she needs it.

Serving as Exec-Vice-President, next succession the presidency. I feel it's very important that there be some sort of continuity in Student Government especially when dealing with important issues as Student Wages, S.R.J.C. Reserves Police procedures. Remember, I have the knowledge to do the job.

KENNETH W. MEYER

I have been asked by fellow students to run for president of the Associated Student Body. I am eager to live up to their expectations and committed to equal representation for all segments of the campus. My foremost objective is to create a group atmosphere which will encourage all members to speak out on the needs and wants of the students they represent. Give me your support and I will give you a die-hard student body.

PENNY S. KARLEWICZ

Strong leadership is a prerequisite for the Associated Student Body to maintain itself as an organization for the students of SRJC. Strength and confidence come from experience and listening to the needs of the students. This past semester I have served as representative on the Inter-Club-Council. Outside of school I was Treasurer for the Colorado State Day Care Association. My goal: to listen and serve the students to the best of my ability.

dence and the cooperation of the student lace, I will execute this office as honestly and as much integrity as possible. I will attempt ut student government back into the hands e students.

MELLE FITZPATRICK

x of you the student to permit me Carmelle patrick to represent you as Executive Viceident as I possess the necessary skill of unit-our opinions with my leadership. I have mani-ed this in my past and present experience at SRJC as Executive Freshman Representa-and Corresponding Secretary. Please vote Car-Fitzpatrick.

VICE PRESIDENT

JENNIFER A. McGREW

My experience working with students as a peer advisor at the J.C. enables me to understand their problems and needs. I have had experience in various segments of student government in high school. I am confident I can communicate the students needs to their government, and put power back in their hands. Students for Active Government.

PAMELA CHRISTINE BULL

S.R.J.C. has one of the best Student Governments in the California School system. This is so, because of the dedication of caring students involved in the future of our college. Vice-President requires a thorough knowledge of the campus clubs, the Student Government, and Parliamentary Procedures. My qualifications well cover all three areas and I feel confident that I can fairly represent the population of SJRC's campus.

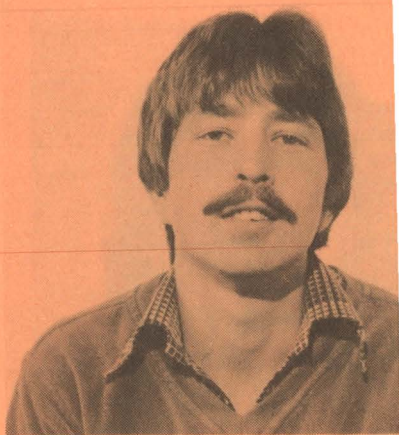

ALYCIA ANN FALK

Fellow students, I too am a student, and like you students I am concerned about how the school is run and want to make sure that we the students have a voice in how this school is run. I have gained valuable experience in Student Government. I am currently on the Publicity Comm. and I am serving on the Wage Proposal Committee to get wage increases for student employees. I am also the president of the Honor Society, Alpha Gamma Sigma.

TREASURER

T T. MATTINGLY

Running for the Treasurer position because I feel that I can bring about a positive change to student government here at S.R.J.C. The "Party for Active Government" offer an alternative to the current student government structure and for this reason I urge all of you to vote for candidates who belong to that party of change.

RON R. PAGTER

Currently involved in student government as a survey commissioner, and I feel that at least I have acquired enough knowledge to do a admirable job at the position of treasurer. My qualifications are dedication and an interest in the needs of students. If elected, I will not stop at Treasurer; I plan to become more involved in various committees as a voice for the students of SRJC.

RECORDING SECRETARY

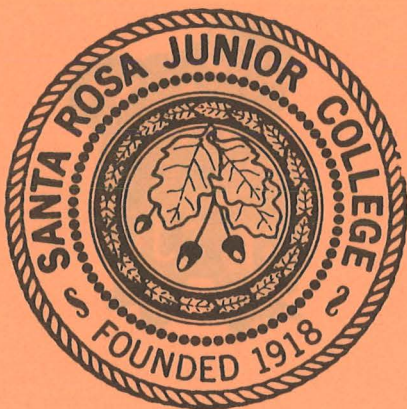

MARY C. LYNCH

As your Recording Secretary I will provide the student populace with accurate records of every meeting. As a member of Students for Positive Reform, I urge you all to vote for us so we can create a student government that is responsive to student needs.

MANNIE CHIU

I've always liked working with people and getting involved in school activities. So when I came to SJRC last fall, I decided to continue my involvement and joined a few clubs. Now, during my second semester, I am the ICC representative of the CT Club and was also appointed to be the Recording Secretary. My job as ICC secretary is similar to the skills required of the position I am seeking. Please vote for me for Recording Secretary of Fall 1982.

ORRESPONDING SECRET

DREE A. VAN BEBBER

As corresponding secretary, I will actively support the increase of communication between the College Student Assembly and the student populace. As a member of the "Students for Positive Government," I am among those who are seeking a positive government structure, in order to provide a greater communication level between student government and student populace.

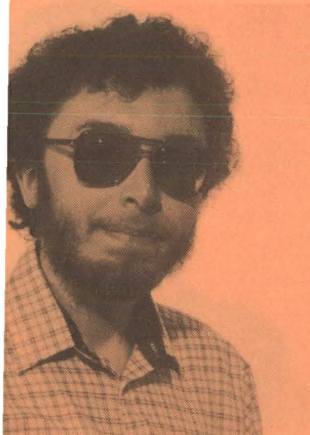

MARY L. FRASER

The office of corresponding secretary involves the student voice being heard. In office I hope to be able to open even more, the channels of communication to the student body. For the past two semesters I have been involved in the representative area of student government and now feel able to take on the added responsibility of this office.

SOPHOMORE REPRESENTATI

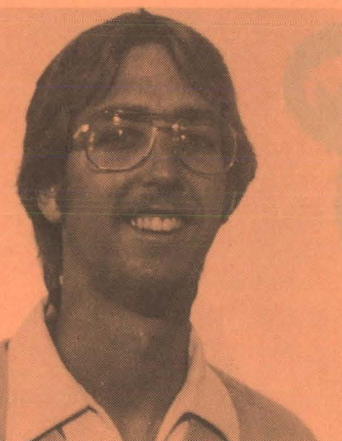

RONALD A. ROMANO

I am a candidate for this office in student government simply to be able to have a chance of making certain changes that will be of benefit to students attending this school. As much student control of student government is what there should be. There hasn't been much evidence of not enough evidence of making students the dominant factor in the government created for its benefit and welfare.

MADELEINE FITZPATRICK

As Sophomore representative I pledge myself to advancing understanding and communication on issues between students and their government body and to serve only the students' interests.

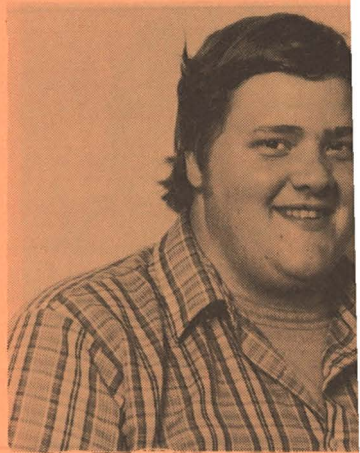

CHRISTOPHER RUSSO

Hi, my name is Chris Russo. I'm running for the office of sophomore representative. I am majoring in engineering and am involved in several clubs on campus, including AGS (Alpha Gamma Sigma) and T.E.C. (The Engineering Club). If I were elected sophomore representative, one of my main goals would be to close the gap between the students and the government. As I see it from my point of view as a student, these groups seem far apart.

PHOMORE REPRESENTAT

OTHY P. CANTLON

My name is Tim Cantlon, I am running for office of sophomore rep. I am presently the Enforcement Rep. to CSA, in an attempt to move the relationship between the Campus and the students at SRJC, I would a great like to represent you as your sophomore rep.

FRESHMAN REPRESENTATIV

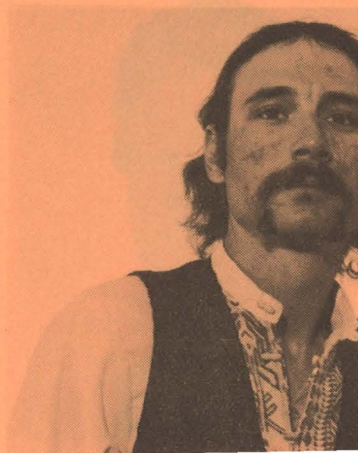

TA M. JACOBUCCI

I have strong leadership and student opinion is needed here at the J.C. I will be able to provide strength and leadership needed for the freshman class. I feel that I am qualified for this position because of my ability to work with people.

AN E. PERRY

I am presently a 1st semester music major who has lived in the Sonoma County area for the past 10 years. I intend on being on this campus for the next three years as a full time student. I am very concerned about the gravity of the political problems that confront us on the community, national and international levels. Therefor I am active as a student in politics standing for basic human rights.

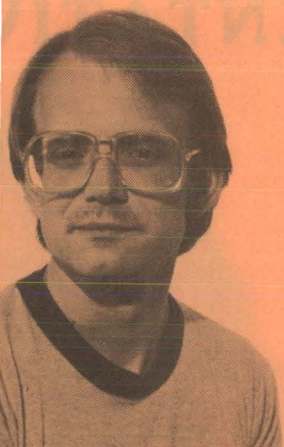

FRESHMAN -

HOMORE REPRESENTATIVE

STEPHANIE RUEHMANN

It's my belief that any Representative should bring to their position enthusiasm, incentive to get involved, and as much experience in student government as possible. As Arts and Lectures Commissioner for the past year I have actively participated in the College Student Assembly and other student activities gaining the experience needed to properly represent my constituents. My election as Freshman Representative ensures that the Freshman class of SRJC will have an experienced voice in student government.

KENNETH HEIDBREDER

This is my first year at SRJC. This semester has also been my first experience as Ex-offender Commissioner in connection with student government. I feel I understand the views and needs of my fellow students and would appreciate the chance to serve you as freshman representative.

SCOTT ZUMWALT

I've chosen to run for freshman representative because it's an excellent way to get involved and learn about student government. The position will help me in understanding how and by what decisions are made. In the last month I've spoken to office members about student tuition and flexible calendar. I'd like the opportunity to work with these people and involve myself in student affairs. My enthusiasm about student concerns make me the best candidate.

STUDENT TRUSTEE

position of Student Trustee has developed into a significant and meaningful method for representing the needs of students and the rest of the campus community. Consideration must be given to the community at large which provides the funding for our facility at S.R.J.C. Next year we'll be looking at diminishing funds, possible tuition, student fees and the real possibility of not being able to take those individuals who would like to attend our college. It's mandatory that the person in the position of student trustee be well versed in the present and upcoming difficulties. It's equally mandatory that the Student Trustee be able to listen and communicate with all factions of the campus community in order to represent student interests fairly and responsibly. It's for these reasons that I'm running again for the position of Student Trustee and feel that I'm the best most qualified candidate.

Mark ~~Evans~~. I think the amp would be alright if used with ~~restraint~~. An amp would allow expression without yelling however if the volume was too high it would serve as a nuisance instead of helping

David Evans - Use of the amp would be alright if the privilege of same would be used with discretion. The "coop crowd" assembled each day from noon on usually seek rest and relaxation from classes. I don't believe they should be subjected to boisterous shouting. The use of the amp makes free speech easier on the ears.

B. Allen Weston An amplifier and P.A. system would result in cleaner, more professional, less

I think power-amplification for Hyde Park is a great thing but I could still barely hear

Power to the people! Yes to power amp. The tree speaker was loud enough to be heard on the

The idea of the Park is great, but to

Hello, my name is Mike Puccioni. I am the team captain of our SRJC Water Ski team. We have had a team for two years, now. Our first year we placed 7th in our Western Conference, and this year we placed 5th.

Collegiate water skiing is a nationwide sport. The nation is divided into six conferences. Our conference is made up Washington, Oregon, Calif., and Nevada. For the past ^{4 YEARS} there has been an all star tournament between the Western and South Central Conferences. The top five skiers in each event go to the tournament. This year the all star tournament is going to be a nation wide competition, including all six conferences.

There are three events in a tournament: slalom, trick, and jump. This year I placed 6th in men's trick. (the top five go to the tourney.) The #1 skier can not go because he doesn't have I2 units, therefore I am #5.

The tourney will be held in New Orleans on May 22nd and 23rd. I am asking the ASB for $500.00 to cover my expenses on this trip. I need to cover air fare, lodging, and meals.

COLLEGIATE ALL STAR TOURNEY PLANNED FOR NEW ORLEANS

The First Annual Collegiate All Star Classic Water Ski Tournament will be held this May 22nd and 23rd in festive New Orleans. The 1 round, 3 event collegiate tournament will be hosted by the South Central Conference of the National Collegiate Water Ski Association, in conjunction with the New Orleans Water Ski Club.

The tournament will feature competition among (6) six teams: One team fielded from each of the six NCWSA Conferences. Each Conference's All-Star Team will be selected by the members of its Conference.

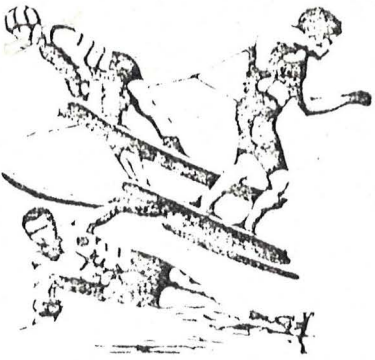

Unique in format, the tournament is an extension of the successful Ski Master "All-Star Shoot-Outs" held between the Western and South Central Conferences for the past (3) three years.

The New Orleans site boasts a private lake with plentiful wind protection, located just off of Interstate 12, north of New Orleans.

In addition to the competition, plans call for a banquet party, and an evening on Bourbon Street.

For more information, contact Tournament Chairman Elgin Faulkner, 1443 Durango, Houston, Texas 77055 (713/464-1271).

To: Executive Cabinet
From: Jim Thomas
Subject: Special purpose ASB supplement

In the past nine years we have asked for additional funding help from the ASB on three different occasions (the last time was during the 1978-79 fiscal year). For all three requests the ASB has generously accomodated our needs. We are now asking you for a special purpose ASB supplement in the amount of $1500.00 for the construction of two fences at our pre-school site, and the labor costs to construct a storage shed at the infant center.

In January 1982 our toddler and pre-school programs moved into two larger more appropriate rooms in the same building we have been in since November 1978. Because of this move, and the need to insure compatability with other programs that will be moving into the same building, we need two fenced areas. Our budget does not have the moneys to accomodate any of this need. Our ongoing budget is limited to operations and maintenance expenses, and does not include funding for capital outlay.

Fence estimates have been secured from six contractors, and copies are attached for your inspection.

The increased number of infants served, and the small space that accomodates the infant program, has made space a premium. A storage area is needed, and funding has been received for the purchase thereof. We either need capable volunteers, or labor costs which we figured at $100.00 to get this shed constructed.

We appreciate your consideration in this matter, and we will be happy to provide additional information as necessary.

Sincerely,

Jim Thomas
Pre-school Director

ARTICLE VI EXPENDITURES

All expenditures of Associated Students, Trust, or Organization accounts shall follow the procedures outlined below.

SECTION 1. The person seeking the funds shall fill out a requisition. Each organization shall have on file with the Accounts Manager a current Signature Card, signed by the organization's faculty advisor.

A requisition for an organization's funds must have the two authorized signatures which appear on the organization's Signature Card. It must also have the signature of the Activities Advisor. (In case of emergency the Assistant Activities Advisor or the Dean of Students may authorize an expenditure).

A requisition for Associated Students' funds must be signed by the Treasurer and the Activities Advisor. (In case of emergency, or the prolonged absence of the Associated Students' Treasurer, requisitions may be signed by the ASB President, ASB Executive Vice-President, or the ASB Vice-President and the Activities Advisor.)/

SECTION 2. The approved requisition shall then be presented to the Accounts Manager.

SECTION 3. Upon receipt of an approved requisition indicating that a check is necessary, the Accounts Manager shall prepare the check. Ordinarily, checks shall be made out to the vendor. Any goods or services paid for by check must be validated by receipted bills, which must be returned to the Accounts Manager, indicating that delivery has been made. In the event that the check is made payable to a student officer or faculty member (himself not the vendor), it is the duty of this person to obtain receipts for all money paid out and to return these immediately to the Accounts Manager. Individuals obtaining goods or services without authorization will be held personally responsible for the payment of them.

ARTICLE VI EXPENDITURES

Section 1 Paragraph 3

While over expenditures are not encouraged, it is possible that on occasion over expenditures will occur. It is necessary when events necessitate that the best judgement of the advisors and the treasurer (or those officers designated to act for the treasurer) will be relied upon. During the regular semester, budget changes will be presented to CSA that would alter the budget to reflect and correct overexpenditures. At the close of the budget year the advisor and the treasurer will be empowered to make those expenditures necessary to meet the obligations of the Associated Students even though those expenditures may, on occasion, result in overexpenditures in certain budget categories.

After the close of each fiscal year the accounts manager will determine the amount of Associated Students' funds remaining. The Executive Cabinet will determine how these funds are to be utilized by creating designated surplus accounts. Any funds in designated surplus accounts not expended by the close of the fiscal year will be transferred to the frozen reserve of the Associated Students.

IN RESPONSE TO my questions about that creek that traverses the Junior College neighborhood, comes Judy Sonnenshine of the Poppy Creek Nursery School, SRJC's child care center.

When the naming of the school was in question, says Judy, research indicated that the creek that ran past the Congregational Church, where the infant care facility is located, was called Poppy Creek and the school was named accordingly.

I think we'll have to go with that. The creek doesn't show on any maps I have. Paulin Creek is a somewhat larger stream that flows past the county administration center, follows along Chanate a ways and empties into the Pina Creek Reservoir. The little one is in the area of Poppy Drive. And besides, Poppy is a great name for a creek. Why tamper with a good thing?

* QUALIFIED FOR NATIONAL WHEELCHAIR GAMES

 NEW NATIONAL WHEELCHAIR ATHLETIC GAMES RECORD

Hello, my name is Mike Puccioni. I am the team captain of our SRJC Water Ski team. We have had a team for two years, now. Our first year we placed 7th in our Western Conference, and this year we placed 5th.

Collegiate water skiing is a nationwide sport. The nation is divided into six conferences. Our conference is made up Washington, Oregon, Calif., and Nevada. For the past ^{4 YEARS} there has been an all star tournament between the Western and South Central Conferences. The top five skiers in each event go to the tournament. This year the all star tournament is going to be a nation wide competition, including all six conferences.

There are three events in a tournament: slalom, trick, and jump. This year I placed 6th in men's trick. (the top five go to the tourney.) The #1 skier can not go because he doesn't have I2 units, therefore I am #5.

The tourney will be held in New Orleans on May 22nd and 23rd. I am asking the ASB for $500.00 to cover my expenses on this trip. I need to cover air fare, lodging, and meals.

COLLEGIATE ALL STAR TOURNEY PLANNED FOR NEW ORLEANS

The First Annual Collegiate All Star Classic Water Ski Tournament will be held this May 22nd and 23rd in festive New Orleans. The 1 round, 3 event collegiate tournament will be hosted by the South Central Conference of the National Collegiate Water Ski Association, in conjunction with the New Orleans Water Ski Club.

The tournament will feature competition among (6) six teams: One team fielded from each of the six NCWSA Conferences. Each Conference's All-Star Team will be selected by the members of its Conference.

Unique in format, the tournament is an extension of the successful Ski Master "All-Star Shoot-Outs" held between the Western and South Central Conferences for the past (3) three years.

The New Orleans site boasts a private lake with plentiful wind protection, located just off of Interstate 12, north of New Orleans.

In addition to the competition, plans call for a banquet party, and an evening on Bourbon Street.

For more information, contact Tournament Chairman Elgin Faulkner, 1443 Durango, Houston, Texas 77055 (713/464-1271).

To: Executive Cabinet
From: Jim Thomas
Subject: Special purpose ASB supplement

In the past nine years we have asked for additional funding help from the ASB on three different occasions (the last time was during the 1978-79 fiscal year). For all three requests the ASB has generously accomodated our needs. We are now asking you for a special purpose ASB supplement in the amount of $1500.00 for the construction of two fences at our pre-school site, and the labor costs to construct a storage shed at the infant center.

In January 1982 our toddler and pre-school programs moved into two larger more appropriate rooms in the same building we have been in since November 1978. Because of this move, and the need to insure compatability with other programs that will be moving into the same building, we need two fenced areas. Our budget does not have the moneys to accomodate any of this need. Our ongoing budget is limited to operations and maintenance expenses, and does not include funding for capital outlay.

Fence estimates have been secured from six contractors, and copies are attached for your inspection.

The increased number of infants served, and the small space that accomodates the infant program, has made space a premium. A storage area is needed, and funding has been received for the purchase there of. We either need capable volunteers, or labor costs which we figured at $100.00 to get this shed constructed.

We appreciate your consideration in this matter, and we will be happy to provide additional information as necessary.

Sincerely,

Jim Thomas
Pre-school Director

Statement:

I believe it is important when electing officers to Executive Cabinet positions to keep in mind that RESPONSE-ABILITY comes largely from experience - and that both experience and responsibility are essential to good government. I am asking you to vote for me on the basis of my experience in Student Government offices and accountability concerning current issues. For example:

- 1) I am for greater, PUBLISHED accountability from the Student Government - and in this respect, an expanded, sophisticated, college press coverage is a pre-requisite to the hoped-for improvement in students' participation in government.
- 2) I am definitely against requiring tuition fees to be paid by ALL students. Beyond this, an extensive study is necessary before anyone can fairly come to a conclusion in support of changing the 'Free For All' tuition policy of California Community Colleges - or designating who must begin to pay.
- 3) I would like to see Student Government work towards having Doyle Scholarships that are currently available only to first and second year students, be extended to the third year student whenever third-year participation is normal OR mandatory to the program.

I would like to say that I abide by Confucius' advice: "Take conscientiousness and sincerity as your ruling principles", and I take this opportunity to thank you for your support in the past.

Sincerely,

Carmelle Fitzpatrick

S.R.J.C. has one of the best Student Governments in the California School system. This is so, because of the dedication of caring students involved in the future of our college. Vice-President requires a thorough knowledge of the campus clubs, I.C.C. Student Government, and Parlimentary Procedures. My qualifications well cover all three areas and I feel confident that I can fairly represent the population of SJRC's campus.

POSTERS AND BALLOONS featured last week's student elections. However, despite the party atmosphere, doubts and questions arose about the election procedures. One new club this semester, SAG, was rapped on the knuckles for beginning promotions early, a rule which SAG felt to be unfair.

Questions over successful election

by Teresa Mariani

Though marked by the highest voter turnout in the last 10 years, last week's ASB elections were also marred by balloting procedures that many students found to be unethical and bordering upon illegal.

Though the loudest complaints came from the losing candidates, most of whom were members of SAG, many students questioned the heavy lobbying of voters that took place in the polling area.

SAG members were also concerned by the fact that some 40 ballots were temporarily left out of the computer count — ballots which turned out to make the winning majority for SAG candidate Lorree Van Bebber in the race for corresponding secretary.

Asked why the ballots were left out of the computer count until after all other ballots had gone through the computer which tabulated the votes, student activities assistant Bob Flores and elections commissioner John Dericksen explained that the ballots had accidentally been left in Flores' closet, where both blank and used ballots are stored "under lock and key" during the nights between voting and tabulating the election results.

When the computer showed that the number of ballots tabulated was 40 short of the number of students recorded as having voted, "The only thing I could think of was that somehow the 40 ballots were still in the cabinets locked up,"

Flores explained. The missing ballots were fed into the computer and tabulated, he stressed.

Though the storage of used and unused ballots seemed to have instigated the complaints, Flores said the ASB has no plans to change the ballot storage system.

SAG candidates charge that volunteers working the polls were telling voters who to vote for as they handed out ballots. Flores admitted that one poll worker advised a voter to vote for non-SAG candidates, but said it was an isolated incident.

"We had an individual working at the poll, and someone came up and asked that person, 'hey, who should I vote for?' So the guy told him who he'd voted for."

Flores said poll workers are never supposed to give any such voting suggestions, and that he was not aware of the incident at the time it occurred. "Mari Maguire was there and she went and told him, 'Hey, you can't do that; you can't tell people how to vote.' So that got nipped in the bud right there," Flores stressed.

However, SAG candidates Ken Meyer, Mary Lynch, and Robert Mattingly said such voter counseling was consistently occurring during both Wednesday and Thursday's polling periods.

"It wasn't isolated. It happened more than once. We watched them. We didn't think we could do anything about it," said Lynch.

"It happened more than once," said Meyer. "I saw it, Mari Maguire saw it, Bob Flores saw it. If he even admits it happened once, that's a reason for us to complain."

Flores refused to give the name of the interloping volunteer. "I can't disclose that. It might be unfair to him [the poll worker] unless the full story was brought out."

The lobbying of voters by various candidates and interested parties became so intense that Flores and assistant dean of student services Eugene Canevari had to use electrical tape to mark the 15 foot boundary area around the polls which election regulations stipulate must remain campaign and lobby free while voters are casting ballots.

"People were standing too close to the polls initially. We told them about the election code," said Flores. "Then there were some discrepancies about how far was 15 feet. So we said okay; let's play romper room," and marked off the boundary in tape. Flores then told the candidates they could not pass that line and lobby.

Though lobbyists stayed out of the 15 foot boundary after the tape was put up, many lobbyists told students how to vote after they had left the campaign-free zone with ballots in hand. There is no law in any SRJC code stating that voters must remain in the polling area while they are voting; nor is there any law preventing lobbyists outside the area from telling people how they should vote.

SRJC's student activities deans said there is no way they can stop students from listening to anyone interested in lobbying for particular candidates and that such restraint might be a violation of the constitutional right to freedom of speech.

Though not illegal, many students thought such practices were clearly unethical. "That doesn't happen in the real world," complained Mattingly, who lost the race for treasurer to Cameron Patger, 231-451. "One political science instructor at SRJC advised us to contest the election on the grounds that it was conducted unfairly," Mattingly added.

After the meeting Monday night, SAG's losing candidates decided not to contest the election results. "At this point it would sound like a pack of losers crying, 'Unfair!' The important thing is to bring a few changes to the voting process," Meyer explained Tuesday.

If the election remains uncontested, the officers elected by the 798 voters will take office June 13. In the race for president, Lori Fisk beat SAG candidate Ken Meyer by a slim 58 votes: 394-336. Carmelle Fitzpatrick earned 409 votes to Greg Kuypers 308 to win the Executive Vice-Presidential race. SAG candidate Jennifer McGrew won the vice president's office with 383 votes, beating the 213 and 112 votes earned by Pam Bull and Alycia Falk, respectively. Mannie Chiu earned 386 votes to ease out Mary Lynch's 317 in another close race, this time for Recording Secretary. Van Bebbler won the Corresponding Secretary office by 335 votes, while Mary Fraser trailed her with 318 votes.

Surfers plan a big bash

by Julia Park

"Hey, if people go, it's gonna be a great time for all, a lot of good music, good dancing. It's a major end of the year bash!" says Tim Ossun, president of SRJC's surf club, more commonly known as the Wave Length Club. Ossun is referring to the "bash" the club is sponsoring May 28 featuring three popular area bands.

The Marin County band 415, which has played at Day on the Green and opened for the band Journey, will be the main attraction, according to Ossun. Hailing from Santa Rosa are Pavlov's Dogs, "a new wave, statement-oriented dance band with songs like 'Bob, the Wicked Stepdad,' 'Pizzaface,' and the immortal 'Evasive Hop,'" says Ossun.

The Tearaways, who will open the show, also originate from the Redwood Empire; the band plays pop rock and in the words of Ossun, "they're a rock-steady power trio!

"It [the bash] was Ian Purvis' idea. He's doing a lot of major work," says Ossun. Purvis is an SRJC student who is a friend of Ossun.

"At first it was gonna be just a little surf club party. Then we got more bands together and rented a big hall. It's our personal assault on boredom," says Ossun with a radical grin.

"The theme should be like, 'School's out, but finals aren't over yet, so let's get drunk and not worry about it!!' BYOB!" he adds, laughing.

"The party is promoted by a couple of inexperienced JC students and we need everyone's support to make this a successful venture. If we pull it off, we may do it again," he says positively.

"We'd like to sell as many tickets as we can" before the show, says Ossun. "We're just hoping to break even. That's all. That's our goal."

The party will take place at the Sonoma Veteran's Memorial Building in Sonoma. Tickets are $5 in advance and $6 the day of the show. The doors will open at 8 p.m. Tickets are available at Stanroy Music in Santa Rosa, Ruggle's Music in Sonoma, and at the table the Wave Length Club plans to have on the Coop every Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday until the show.

This will be a private party and only those with tickets will be allowed, but anyone may buy tickets. For information, call Ossun in Petaluma, 762-1764, or Purvis in Santa Rosa, 542-3108.

The party should have "major draw, many girls and guys," says Ossun. So students who find themselves with nothing to do next Friday evening might just go check out the scene in Sonoma.

No complications mark student budget

by Maureen Layne

The ASB [Associated Student Body] plans to spend nearly $100,000 on various SRJC programs in the 1982-83 school year. Student government began preparing next year's budget in late March and received final approval at the May 17 CSA [College Student Assembly] meeting.

ASB raises most of its money through student body card sales. It disperses the income to programs such as SRJC athletics, forensics [speech team], theatre arts, spirit team, ethnic programs and Poppy Creek Day Care Center.

Deciding how to allot the money can become very controversial if the requested amounts total much more than the total projected income. However, ASB President Mari Maguire said that planning the budget this year ran smoothly.

"There wasn't a lot of cutting going on. This year it was really mellow," she said. "The hot topics tend to be Poppy Creek [Day Care Center] and forensics."

The five person budget committee, chaired by ASB Treasurer Andrew Bisonette, decided to allocate forensics and Poppy Creek their full requests of $5,832 and $6,900, respectively.

Maguire explained the committee's reasons for allotting so much money for these groups. Of forensics she said, "It's an incredible experience [being on the speech team]. If they didn't get any money from the ASB then they wouldn't exist. The speech team uses its money to pay for the expenses of traveling to tournaments.

"At Poppy Creek," Maguire noted, "they provide an invaluable program. The money helps get them started each year."

The largest allocation of $13,294 goes to the athletic program. "As a whole, athletics uses a lot of money. But then again, they bring in money," Maguire said. The committee estimates that ticket sales for football and basketball games next year should generate $6,400.

One group that received more than twice as much money in this year's budget than last year's is the spirit team [cheerleaders]. Maguire explained that the $2,500 is because there are 10 cheerleaders next year instead of five.

She said that Bob Flores, student activities assistant, is advising the group and is in the process of building a new program. They will use the allocation to pay for cheerleading camp and uniforms. "Actually, a lot of it is because we have so much faith that Bob [Flores] is going to do a really good job. They're going to be the best group of cheerleaders we've had," said Maguire.

None of the clubs received major cuts from the budget committee. "This year there was only about $1,000 difference [between the estimated income and the request total]. There has been like a $6,000 or $7,000 difference before," said Gene Canevari, assistant dean of student services.

Canevari, who served as a non-voting member on the budget committee explained his philosophy for planning the ASB budget. "You budget income conservatively and expenses excessively. This time the income isn't conservative. It's a little optimistic," he said referring to the budget committee's anticipation of $80,000 from student body card sales.

He said that once budgeted, the ASB tends "to be stingy in the fall and generous in the spring." He explained this is because they still don't know the exact income total until after spring student body card sales.

But in the spring, the ASB usually has left over money and "when things come along, then CSA can be a little more generous." He gave Poppy Creek as an example. They are requesting money to build a fence. Canevari believes that CSA will give the day care center the amount requested.

If something "pops us" in the middle of the year that the budget committee didn't plan for, there is $1,500 set aside in student services, according to Canevari.

Maguire said that everyone seems pleased with this year's budget. "Only one person came to the hearings [set up to receive any complaints about the preliminary budget] and that was only to ask a question," said Canevari.

Fall holds no surprises

by Tammie Edwards

"I'm not looking for any massive growth," in enrollment for next semester, said Jack Rooney, registrar. He went on to say that if there is any growth, it will be in proportion to the county's growth. He's fairly confident that there won't be a large enrollment crush.

But, Rooney said, possible cuts in state funding may counteract any rise in enrollment.

"When you really don't know if you're going to be funded totally for growth, you might be reluctant to open up programs that would encourage increased enrollment," he explained.

"We don't know how much we're going to be funded for ADA [Average Daily Attendance]. It makes us cautious and not wanting to go full boar to open up programs where funding would be limited or not there at all," Rooney said.

SRJC now receives $1700 per student per year in state ADA money. "We're down to rock bottom for receiving state money for ADA," he said. But that figure may drop even lower if the state decides to cut out funding.

"We can't come up with a budget for next year because we have no idea what kind of funding we're getting.

"We're not worried because we have the most efficient school of them all. We're a flexible school. We're not rigid," Rooney said.

But "it makes us all dance on eggs," he admitted.

editorial

crumbling and filling the potholes

The impending state raid on SRJC's reserves may not be the best reason to do something about the campus eyesore, otherwise known as the Analy Lot temporaries. But it may be what we need to finally goad the Board of Trustees into action on the matter.

Something has to be done about the Analy temporaries, or they will soon begin to crumble and fill the potholes that abound in the Geary Square Area. In January of this year, while parceling out funds for campus construction, Board members banded about the ideas of remodeling the temporaries for around $700,000 or permanently scrapping them and constructing a new building at a cost of about $3½ million.

What happened? True to form, the trustees tabled the Analy issue, allotting funds to remodel and renovate almost every other needy area of the campus, while leaving the Analy temps to decay in a fashion similar to the bridal banquet of Miss Havisham in Dickens' "Great Expectations." It seems that the $3½ million the Board estimated the new building would cost was too much to part with, while the idea of turning the temporaries into permanents was not palatable either — not even at $700,000.

The strongest argument the trustees had in defense of their inaction over the Analy temps was that, though a new building might be the best solution, they could not deplete SRJC's reserves for the needed millions while financing other needed campus construction projects.

Now, with the state threatening to siphon off anything that's not nailed down in SRJC's bank vaults, that excuse holds as much water as the bargain-brand paper towels Mrs. Scott used to complain about on old TV commercials.

The Analy lot area is a blight on our otherwise extremely beautiful campus. The tutorial center, Enabling Services office, EOPS department, and classrooms in the Analy lot deserve better housing than plywood boxes with draying ceilings, poor ventilation, faulty heating/cooling systems, and surroundings that are downright ugly.

Though shifting classes now held in the temporaries to another area during construction would be an inconvenience, we join the many voices on campus in saying that a new hall along the lines of Lark or Emeritus would be worth even the most extreme inconvenience during the construction time.

We urge the Board to allot the funds for the construction of a new building in the Analy lot area, before it is too late.

I am the daughter of a Holocaust survivor. Seeing your article on the Jewish side of the Middle East situation was a hopeful sign.

If there had been a Jewish homeland previous to WWII, my father's two sisters, three brothers, two nieces, a nephew, mother and father would not have been slaughtered. My father would not have been a Nazi slave, had he had a country to go to.

It should be noted that there were no Palestinian people, as such, previous to Israel achieving nationhood. The "Palestinians" were created as an excuse to repossess the land of Israel. If the Arab world were truly concerned with a "Palestinian" homeland, two-thirds of Saudi Arabia is unpopulated and available.

The terrorism of the PLO is known and condemned throughout the world. I would hope SRJC students would do as much.

REMARKS TO THE COLLEGE STUDENT ASSEMBLY
Final Meeting - Spring Semester 1982
E.S. Canevari May 24, 1982

YOU HAVE MADE A DIFFERENCE

After three hours of research -- I found that there wasn't anyone in recorded history that had said anything to fit this occasion. I could not find the great and eloquent words -- so, I will need to make do with my own simple words.

I wanted to say something special to you. I want you to pause for a moment so that you can "own" this time and this place. There will never be another quite like it. And, I promise you that this time and this place will remain forever quite special to you.

I need to be careful -- because I am prone to become very sloppy at times like this. (Spencer's Mountain - Boot-Sock Story)

As each of you have grown quite special to me I am loath to bring this time to a close.

I want you to know that you have made a difference! Your service has enhanced the luster of the college itself and you have made significant contributions to the quality of life for our studentbody.

You have made a difference for me. I was not sure that I would be here today. Nor that I would be able to look forward to working with some of you this next year. This year has been difficult for me. The Administrative Reorganization has continued with its own form of craziness. And, at one time, I made the somewhat over-dramatic statement to Mari that she might find herself presiding over the end of the Golden Age of the Associated Students. That time has passed and the world looks brighter.

Recently - (Lamont Royer story) it wasn't until I went out and talked with some students then I remembered again what I was doing here -- serving students. For me, each of you have made a difference. You have made a difference for the college for the studentbody, and for me -- and I give you my heart-felt thanks.

Mari came to this second semester with her own doubts. She is one of three student body presidents (out of 32) that were elected to a second semester term. The first in 1966, lost his presidency on Grade Point Average. The second, after getting married, resigned part way into the second semester. Most presidents have been burned out after one semester and ready to leave office.

Mari has not only survived a second semester, she has prevailed over it. She has elevated the stature and prestige of Student Government to new and previously un-attained heights. She has demonstrated her courage and stamina and her abiding concern for the welfare of the students on this campus. She has demonstrated her love for those about her.

She has made a difference. Her accomplishments and yours are many, I congratulate you and I congratulate Mari!

She has fought the good fight
She has finished the course
She has kept the faith
She has made a difference

Would you join me now in a standing round of applause. For Mari Maguire - President, Santa Rosa Junior College Associated Students.

State: Keep hands off SRJC funds

Santa Rosa Junior College is being threatened by a reduction in state funds which would amount to nothing less than official punishment for prudent management.

Again this year, the target for some legislative budget writers is a $9 million reserve fund college trustees have managed to set aside for campus improvements.

The money from Santa Rosa and a handful of other community colleges which succeeded in accumulating small savings is a lure to lawmakers struggling to close a $3.3 billion budget deficit for 1982-83.

To claim the reserves, the state would simply reduce the college's annual allocation by an equal amount.

At Santa Rosa Junior College, this reserve is something of a tradition, a local commitment to squeeze and trim so dollars from operating funds can be set aside for campus projects. Usually, these are projects for which no state funds are available.

Since 1974, $8.9 million has been expended on such worthwhile additions as a $2.6 million field house, a $1.2 million remodeling of Burbank Auditorium, a $1.2 million expansion of Doyle Student Center, and a $633,000 renovation of Analy Hall.

More investments are planned, including $1.2 million for expansion of instructional facilities in math-electronics and in business management. Both are crucial to meeting the changing job needs of today's students.

These budget savings have made it possible to modernize older buildings on SRJC's picturesque campus, keep pace with an explosive growth in enrollment over the past decade (from 12,244 to 22,642), and maintain quality education across the spectrum of vocational and academic instruction.

It is important to note that the college board of trustees managed to set aside these monies, though the college faces financial disadvantages in comparison with other districts.

Santa Rosa is among the lowest 15 districts in the state in revenue per student.

Part of the savings came in the cost of management which was the lowest in the state in two of the past four years, second in one year, and third in the other.

Whether this record of success will impress legislative budget writers is not certain, but trustees and college president Roy G. Mikalson are worried.

"We're not asking for more money," Mikalson told us. "We're just asking to keep the money we have."

For more than 60 years, Santa Rosa Junior College has served as a unique educational and cultural asset for the Redwood Empire.

We urge its many friends to lend their support in letters to their state legislators.

Three Sonoma County lawmakers, in particular, may be in unique positions to help: Sen. James. Nielsen, R-Woodland, a member of the Senate Education Committee and the Senate Finance Committee; Sen. Barry Keene, D-Elk, a member of the Senate Rules Committee and of the Senate Democratic leadership; and Assemblyman Douglas Bosco, D-Occidental, a member of the Assembly Ways and Means Committee, and the Democratic Caucus Chairman.

We urge them to lend their voices forcefully so Santa Rosa Junior College can continue to manage its resources wisely and continue to improve.

Sub: Operation & Revenue -- Concession Stand/Haehl Pavilion

In an effort to clarify the questions concerning the operation of the Concession Stand in the Haehl Pavilion, please accept this letter as our Letter of Intent.

The Associated Students expect to receive the revenue generated by the concession stand in the Haehl Pavilion. Unless a bid or proposal procedure is necessary, the concession stand in the Haehl Pavilion will be covered under a contract to Wolcott's Concessions. As you know, under this contractual arrangement the Associated Students receive 20% of the gross sales and if a club works the concession stand, the club receives an additional 20% of the gross sales.

The Associated Students continue to invest over $13,000 annually in the Inter-Collegiate Athletic Programs of the college and the 1982-83 budget of the Associated Students was predicated on the expected increase in concession revenues from the concession stand in the Haehl Pavilion.

Women at the top : Mari Maguire

Fricker

In 18 years since someone served as Associated Student Body president for two consecutive terms . . . until Mariangela Maguire. This vintage Maguire that she had in mind from the beginning most people come into this job at there is so much to be done in a semester they burn out, so I have to pace myself," she says, being the level-headed self-evaluator that is such a visible component of the Maguire style.

Why she sought the presidency, she says, is a concept that is vital to her, drawing experiences to learn about. "As soon as I saw Eric [Assistant ASB president] in action, I wanted to be president. I wanted to see if I could handle the job, to see if I could acquire the authority whereby I would respect me and have confidence in my judgement.

Can think you are intelligent and confident until you are actually in the position? You can't know for sure. For example, take the Board of Trustees, who have the authority in the world. Could they have enough authority that they would respect me? And that my peers would respect me?"

Maguire discusses the people and experiences that have been important to her. She continually returns to this question of what they have taught her about herself and about life.

She discussed her mother: who taught her not to waste a life experience," her best friend, who has taught her about eternal values, who kept her close through hard times and who nurtured her children's self-struggles of her mother created in her a compulsion never to be dependent upon one person but to have a career and to be self-sufficient . . . years in one tiny school district where Maguire, the youngest of four, watched old acquaintances live different lifestyles, gave Maguire an opportunity to learn that she wanted to be independent and nonjudgmental toward

When she moved to Sonoma two weeks out of high school introduced her to a world far less insular and more open . . .

© Joe Turner 1982

IN A COVETED POSITION, ASB PRESIDENT Mari Maguire sits behind her desk.

The miserable first month at SRJC, when she knew no one and couldn't seem to find a niche, which prompted her to join the debate team . . .

The debate team, which has been "the best intellectual experience I've ever had," taught her that she liked competition, and led her to winning the state championship in advocacy debate last year . . .

And the two and a half years of student government experience at SRJC have given her an opportunity to associate with "the most incredible, impressive people" and to learn about herself through them.

Maguire today is an intensely competitive, capable, independent woman who nevertheless recognizes her need for a few close relationships — mentors, friends, family — who have contributed to her growth through the years. These are the people she leans on, the people she says she could never do without.

Yet with these associations comes the difficulty of balancing dependence and independence, a problem she finds magnified in male/female relationships.

"It's not real clear in my head how you balance that," she admits ruefully.

And one of her biggest weaknesses, she feels, is the fact that she is a poor loser.

"I hate to lose," she says, grinning. "So I sometimes find myself avoiding competition that I think I may not win, and that really limits me."

Maguire will have to deal regularly with winning and losing if she continues with her current plan to be an attorney. "Other careers are possible, but this one has stayed with me the most consistently through the years. I have tremendous respect for the law.

"But I know I don't want to do tax law or sit in an office eight hours a day. I like contact with people. I learn so much about myself from them. Other people fascinate me."

This fall Maguire will enter San Francisco State to work toward a major in speech communications and to compete on their debate team.

She specifically selected San Francisco State for its fine speech communications program and, typically, for the highly competitive nature of its debate team.

Asked if she has any regrets about her three years at SRJC, she nods. "If I've made one mistake here, it is that I've never given the attention to my schoolwork that it deserves, and I know that has been stupid of me."

But then she mentions that the SF State forensics coach has introduced her to their top debater, who just happens to be the student government president of the college. And he has already begun recruiting her for some student government committees . . .

Student paychecks might take a hike

by Luisa Fonseca

During her last term in office, ASB President Mari Maguire hopes to accomplish something both "practical and tangible" for the student body at SRJC. Her goal is to raise student wages on campus.

Board of Trustees member Chris Pedroncelli and Dean of Business Services Bill Wilber listened to the ASB wages proposal with satisfaction and acceptance last Thursday. Now Maguire says an ASB student wages committee will take the proposal to Bailey Hall sometime this week in the hopes of getting an administrative recommendation before facing ratification from the SRJC Board of Trustees at its monthly meeting, June 14.

It is not necessary for the student wage proposal to receive a sign of approval from SRJC President Roy Mikalson this week. But Maguire said, "It will show concurrence with the proposal. Basically, we're asking for the reduction of the number of hours of work before a student can get a raise."

The wages proposal will change five present conditions of student employment if passed. First, it will raise student wages. Maguire declined to mention the amount of the raise, saying only that it would be "substantial."

Secondly, the proposal reduces the number of hours a student must work before being eligible for a raise. Now a student employee must put in 500 hours before getting a five-cent per hour wage increase.

Thirdly, the ASB proposal provides for a mandatory evaluation of all student workers, not just Work Experience members. This evaluation would take place on a quarterly basis to "coincide with the accounting office," Maguire said.

Fourthly, students on campus will receive priority over non-students for jobs that are not certified (faculty) or classified (clerical, janitor, etc.). This section applies to temporary work.

Fifthly, the proposal if passed will be subject to optional review in June 1983. "I don't know if we'll need the review to tell the truth," Maguire said. "We want it to be a student and student government review, or an update of the [student wages] agreement with the district. It will always be up to the students to ask for the review."

"I think that's as it should be. Students have to take the initiative to change student wages," Maguire said.

Maguire is hopeful that the proposal will get the presidential recommendation and later ratification from the Board. "I think we have a chance to request reasonable, better wages for students. This [wages increase proposal] will give the district the opportunity to hire better workers, who will probably stay longer, and it will eliminate those who can't cut it through the evaluation," she said.

Maguire claims the proposal requests are very reasonable. "We're not asking for $20 an hour. We understand the financial system [of the campus], but we also understand that students are an integral part of the campus. They help make it run, and they should be compensated accordingly. I don't think anyone will object to that," she said.

Student wages now range from $3.35 to $3.75 an hour. "$3.75 is the most a student can make on this campus, and that's with technical expertise or in a supervisory position. And let's face it, there's not too many of those around," Maguire said. The last time the college raised student wages was in the summer of 1979 when minimum wage increased throughout the nation.

Maguire said that the ASB committee conducted a lot of research to complete the proposal. Work for the present proposal began last year. Former ASB treasurer Hal Van Geison "did all the ground work" of a state wide community college student wage survey, Maguire acknowledged.

"Bill Wilber has also worked with us all the way," explained Maguire. Pedroncelli has been involved only during the last two months when the Board appointed her to examine and work with the proposal.

The survey included 70 other community college districts. Fifty-six responded. Maguire was pleased with the response. The findings of this survey included campuses that paid higher, lower and equal student wages compared to SRJC. "Very few were below minimum wage," Maguire said. The ASB president then said that student enrollment was evaluated to determine an appropriate wage increase.

Student Trustee Katy Bright, who Maguire also praised for doing a great deal of work, then wrote the proposal once the findings were complete.

"This proposal is the most important thing done in my administration," said Maguire. "It's the most practical and tangible work done in my time. It's the one they'll be the most cogniant of."

Outsiders tell views

by Robin Pendergraft

According to a staff member at the registrar office, approximately five percent of the students at SRJC are from out of state. Out of state students seem to have the same problems as local students: transportation, jobs, housing, and nothing for 18 to 21-year-olds to do. These problems seem to multiply though for those students who don't know the area or don't know anyone in it.

Although Santa Rosa is a friendly city it is also a city of cliques — to find a job or house is not a matter of what a person knows but rather who he knows. To enter a sphere of friends a person must be somewhat aggressive, as Norma Santiago from Hawaii pointed out. "When I came to Santa Rosa, I wanted to be a haoli [white] because no one would smile at me. After I was on the swim team people started recognizing me and then I got the smiles."

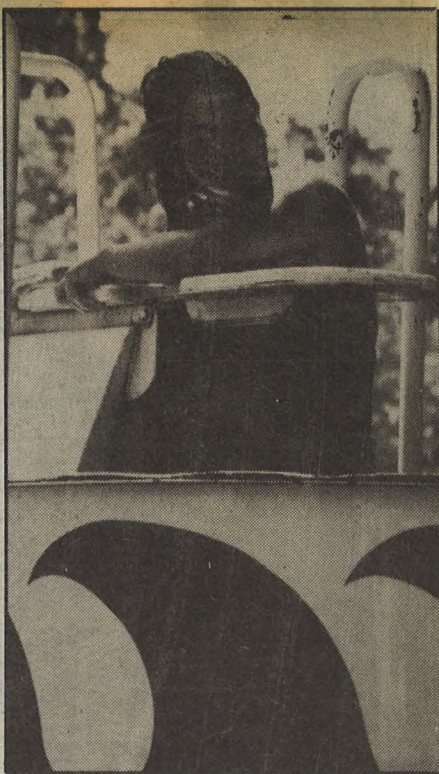

Student Mark Munford from Canada added, "Although I like the people here more than in Canada, Santa Rosans seem to be very cliquish. There are some people here that tend to play high school games."

These out of staters found Santa Rosans to be more open minded and they tended to speak their minds more often than their counterparts at home. Arkansas emigrant Allen Goad felt that Californians were more accepting of people for what they were, not for what they appeared to be. He explained, "In Arkansas, when you see California [license] plates you automatically think that they are either rich, gay, or pot smugglers. When I came to California, people would ask me about Arkansas without any pre-conceived ideas."

Even though California is a good place to meet people, those out of state students who moved here without any family found loneliness. Many students confessed they really did not have anyone to talk to about their personal problems. They felt their loneliness actually brought them closer to their families.

Most out of staters thought Santa Rosa was a hard town to get around. A car was a prerequisite for the development of a social life. "You can't be in a hurry if you are going to take the bus."

Santiago had never driven in a car for more than a couple of hours until she left Hawaii. When she joined the swim team, she had to travel to L.A. for a swim meet. She mused, "After 10 hours in a car and driving down I-5 [noted for not having much scenery] I was real happy to get out of the car."

LAZING ABOUT IN THE SUN is ASB President Mari Maguire. Maguire, who's from Ohio, used to be an out-of-state student. Some out-of-staters say paying higher tuition and feeling left out of the social scene often accompanies the move to the area.

Everyone agreed that Sonoma County was a beautiful place, scenery wise. As Munford put it, "This is an incredibly beautiful area."

"What amazed me," said Santiago, "was the fall. To see all the leaves turning colors and to see bare trees is something you'll never see in Hawaii. The flowers bloom all year long."

Student Pam Bull from Seattle, Washington, likes California because it doesn't rain much here and especially Santa Rosa because "it's close to the ocean."

But what were the reasons these students came to Santa Rosa? They ranged from a good community college football reputation, to the fact that no swim program was offered at a hometown community college, to SRJC's academically well known name.

Mariangela Maguire said, "When I saw the ivy on those old buildings it reminded me of Ohio State University. I knew it was going to be home."

By and large those of us who have lived in Santa Rosa for awhile should remember the words of Luther Burbank, "I firmly believe from what I have seen that this [Redwood Empire] is the chosen spot of all the earth as far as nature is concerned."

ASB has $35G surplus

by Lindsay Webb

SRJC's administration isn't the only bird that's tucked away a reserve nest egg. The Associated Student Body has accumulated a reserve of "about $35,000," according to ASB President Mari Maguire.

The ASB gets its revenue from Student Body Card sales. The reserve has grown "over the years," Maguire explained, because "budget expenditures have been much less than budget revenues."

At the end of each semester, the current CSA draws up the following year's budget. If, at the end of that year, there are surplus funds, those monies are then allocated for specific uses the following semester. If again at the end of the following semester any portion of the funds remain unused, then they are deposited into the ASB reserve account at Exchange Bank.

Some $20,000 of the $35,000 reserves is held in a time certificate, which draws "around 14 percent interest annually," Maguire said. The certificate is renewed semi-annually by the new CSA members. The remaining $15,000 is in a regular savings account.

"It's a funny amount of money," Maguire said. "Not enough for a major project, but it is a significant amount of money. We've never had a need that required that gap."

Anyone can make a proposal to the College Student Assembly to use its funds for a project. If the CSA approved the proposal for using the reserves, it would then be taken to the Board of Trustees for final approval. However, in the past, the regular CSA budget has been able to cover most requests without dipping into the reserve.

Canevari said he advises the CSA to only use the reserve funds for "capital improvement sorts of things, where generations of students would get use out of it."

Also, Canevari said, if the ASB were unable to meet its budget one year, he would consider using the funds to do so.

No proposals have been submitted to the Board to use the funds since the copy machine purchase.

However, "I would hope," she continued, "that if a CSA spent the reserves they would never, never spend the entire amount. It's an emergency fund," she explained, "if a need came up, or if we go sour on card sales one semester and can't meet our budget."

Maguire said that so far the reserves haven't been used much because the CSA can usually meet any special requests with its regular budget.

"We've had a lot of requests this year," she said. "It's been a really active year and people know we're healthy and we've been real receptive to requests."

The ASB has not used the designated surplus for this semester. "About $1,000" will be going into reserve this summer, Maguire said.

Yes, skiing is a school sport — sort of

by Lisa Fertitta

"Either they [students] don't believe you or they've never heard of it. It's like 'I didn't even know we had a water ski team,'" said SRJC water ski captain Mike Puccioni.

Yes, SRJC does have a water ski team and a very good one at that. This virtually unknown six member team is two years old and the men's team [there is no women's team at this time] has "consistently placed third overall" in its conference, the western conference.

This conference includes teams from the states of Washington, Oregon, California, and Nevada. "We compete against two and four year colleges [such as USC, UCLA, Napa Junior College, UOP, and University of Reno, Nevada]," said Puccioni.

Collegiate water skiing is a sport, but this college does not financially fund it. "They [the college] don't consider the water skiing team a sport because we don't have a coach or advisor. We're really not affiliated in any way with the school but yet we are," he explained.

Because SRJC's water ski team does not receive funding from the college, water skiing can be a very expensive sport.

"When we go to a tournament [of which there are eight to 10 yearly], say in San Diego or Long Beach, we [the team] have to drive down there out of our pockets, stay out of our pockets, eat out of our pockets. So it's very expensive."

How expensive?

"I don't know. I would hate to sit down and figure it out," he smiled. "It would probably be very depressing to find out how much money I actually spend."

Puccioni said the sport of water skiing was "so much different from any other sport because of the expense. And also, 'you know, you gotta have at least two other people if you want to go out and ski — someone to drive the boat, someone to observe. So it's not like you can just go out, decide 'it's a nice day; I'm going to go out and ski.' You gotta get some people together," said Puccioni.

©Denton Loomis, 1982

SRJC WATERSKIER MIKE PUCCIONI finished 19th of 25 in trick skiing and 23rd of 25 in the slalom at the National All-Star Tournament in New Orleans, La. The Western Conference, to which SRJC belongs, won both the men's, women's, and combined events at the tournament. Puccioni is shown holding his trick ski.

And even the nearest place for the team to practice is an hour or two away. But some of the other schools in their conference like "Northridge, San Diego, Long Beach, Sacramento — their schools own boats. You [can] take a P.E. class in water skiing. So they get to practice every-day," he said.

SRJC's ski team practices "maybe twice during the semester. It's not really practice. It's just enough to brush up maybe. You really don't get to practice enough." However, Puccioni said these brief brush up practice periods were adequate competition preparation for him.

"I get to practice so much during the summer," he said. He skis at Lake Pillsbury during the summer, three days a week, two hours a day. "See, I learn my run and really practice a lot during the summer, and then [when season starts] it's just a matter of going out and getting used to the water and skiing again, because it's almost second nature after skiing that much during the summer."

Puccioni said that it was "really rough" for the other team members to do well during the season, because "they don't get all the summer practice time" he does.

Puccioni's summer practicing must be sufficiently preparing him for his ski season competition. This year the conference awarded Puccioni a slot on the Western conference team which will travel to New Orleans to compete in the National All-Star Tournament. Puccioni received $250 from the Associated Student Body for tournament expenses.

In this tournament the six nation-wide conferences [Western, South-Central, Central, Florida, Eastern, and North-Eastern] will compete against each other. Each team consists of the top five men and women skiers in the conference in the three events of trick, slalom and jump.

"This [the tournament] is more of an individual meet. This way if you're a good skier but you're not on a good team you can still go and compete in a national tournament — that's why the All-Star Tournament was started [four years ago]," said Puccioni.

Puccioni will compete in the events of trick and slalom. He said he made the conference team because "I'm a consistent skier. I'm not really a good skier compared to some people in our conference."

"I like trick [skiing] the best." Puccioni does 14 tricks in 20 seconds. "Trick is really simple. You get 20 seconds to do as many tricks as you can. And when you fall, you fall, and get whatever [points for the] tricks you made before you fell. Each trick has a certain amount of points it's worth. It would be like diving."

"It's balance to be a good trick skier," but in general, Puccioni said, the sport of water skiing is more of an individual sport — like track — but you're still competing on a team like track. But it's still an individual sport," a sport, Puccioni said, that is slowly being accepted by the school.

"I'm sure within a few years we'll be a regular school sport like any other sport — track or football. It's on its way."

OFFICE OF STUDENT ACTIVITIES

Senator Barry Keene
30 N. San Pedro Rd.
San Rafael, CA

June 3, 1982

Dear Senator Keene;

I am the student trustee on the Sonoma County Junior College District Board of Trustees. I have served in this capacity for the 1981/82 year and have been reelected to serve in the 1982/83 year. I am writing to you in regard to the proposed plans for reviewing Community College Reserve funds.

I have been carefully monitoring the actions of the state legislature in determining sources of revenue for California and am appalled that, once again, education is a primary target for financial reductions and is also seen as a source of revenue by attaching the reserve monies that Community Colleges have set aside to meet their long range needs.

In the case of Santa Rosa Junior College, we have maintained a conservative and comparatively low operating expense program for the management of the college. We are funded by a low tax base from the county. SRJC is supported by solid community involvement that appreciates and uses the community campus frequently. The citizens of our county have recognized for decades that SRJC is the only source of education and training for its citizens, both young adult and re-entry, which provides across-the-board service that will be reinvested in our county.

Santa Rosa Junior College has served the county and the state very well. The reserve monies held by SRJC are used to maintain and upgrade buildings that are as much as 30 years old. It is only with those reserve funds that we are able to maintain health and safety considerations for our older buildings. Several of our newer buildings are financed through reserve funds as opposed to requesting money from the State of California. Often our facilities are enhanced over the state allotment by virtue of the reserves. Our campus provides great significance to our community not only in the form of classrooms but also as a reminder to the citizens that education is a primary and traditional aspect of Sonoma County and should be the concentration of the state.

Santa Rosa Junior College has grown in terms of student population dramatically over the past ten years. It is only with the reserve funds that we are able to keep our doors open and provide education to our burgeoning student population. This year we were not funded for full student enrollment growth and because we have reserve monies, we were able to take an additional 1000 students who wanted and needed to participate in the educational experience. For the next academic year we anticipate even more enrollment growth without full state funding.

I request that you carefully consider these points and also consider the future of education in the State of California. As costs increase at the CSUC level, we can expect greater demand on the Community Colleges by individuals who need an education to further their lives and their employment hopes. Santa Rosa Junior College has been and will continue to be available to serve the citizens of Sonoma County. It would be very helpful if the state legislature would share our commitment to the citizens and taxpayers of the state and counties.

I would appreciate your response to this letter.

Best wishes,

Katherine M. Bright

THE FEROCIOUSLY FREE student press underwent a traumatic experience last week. The Oak Leaf, Santa Rosa Junior College's excellent student newspaper (and I don't use that word lightly since it has been recipient of General Excellence awards from press organizations), reacted with predictable hysteria when the college's business manager, shredded 5,000 advertising inserts intended for distribution in the newspaper.

The incident, subject of both news story and editorial, was seen as part of an ominous plot. No, two ominous plots, actually. One scenario linked Santa Rosa tire dealer and former mayor John Downey with a move to keep Capitol Tire from distributing ads in The Oak Leaf. Another saw the move as the first step in the administration's seizure of power over the student newspaper with the impending departure of journalism instructor and adviser Cathy Mitchell, who has been a champion of the students' rights to run their own newspaper.

SRJC's Business Manager Bill Wilber, who is taking the incident far less seriously than the student journalists, denies both plots. The Downey incident, he says, did not come to his attention until after the shredding. He dismisses the censorship issue as nonexistent, although he does admit that he "questions the instructional value of insert advertising."

Wilber's shredding order came after a mix-up over a vague address. The bundle of inserts, delivered originally to the college warehouse, was addressed to Santa Rosa Junior College "Attention: Toby." Toby is Toby Mansell, Oak Leaf advertising manager, but warehouse employees did not know this and took the name to be a misprint for "Tony." They sent them on to purchasing agent Tony Escovedo. It was Escovedo who called them to the attention of shredder Wilber.

Oak Leaf adviser Mitchell, who has sent Wilber a bill for the $250 in lost revenue to the newspaper, suggests that a telephone call to Capitol Tire would have routed the inserts to the right place. Wilber says the inserts "sat around for 10 days or two weeks" and when no request for them came in, "I decided not to spend staff time finding out where they belonged. Frankly, I thought it was a bundle of junk mail. I had received a flyer from Capitol Tire in my mail at home the day before and I thought this was more of the same. So I said junk 'em."

Wilber, who told an Oak Leaf reporter there was "No way!" he would pay the Oak Leaf bill, or Capitol's printing costs of $200, softened his stance slightly when I spoke to him yesterday: "I'd sure hesitate," he said.

The "Downey Incident" referred to in the Oak Leaf was another matter involving Capitol Tire inserts, which have been included in the school newspaper since 1978. In 1980, according to advisor Mitchell, an SRJC instructor using The Oak Leaf in a classroom discussion distributed the newspapers to his students and carefully removed the inserts, stacking them in a pile on a table.

The classroom was used for a night class that evening attended by Barbara Downey, wife of the owner of Downey Tire. She took one of the inserts home to her husband. Unaware that they were originally newspaper ads, John Downey contacted Roy Mikalsen, the college president, reminding him that Downey Tire had been strong SRJC supporters and suggesting it was unfair for Capitol to have the right to distribute leaflets in classrooms. This news was imparted to the newspaper in the form of a memo from Mikalsen to Mitchell. The spectre of censorship, then, reared its head when the word of the shredding reached the young journalists.

Downey, contacted yesterday at his office, was unaware that his name was being bandied about on campus as one of the villains of the piece. While he was openly cheerful about the news of his competitors' shredded ads, he denied any part in the latest fiasco.

The students can be excused such jumpiness about loss of their freedom. Mitchell, who has won a Pulitzer Prize as co-owner of The Point Reyes Light during her tenure as adviser to the SRJC newspaper, is leaving to take a job as a journalism teacher at the University of North Carolina.

Cathy has been fierce in her defense of the students' right to make their own decisions. And their own mistakes. They are fearful her replacement, without tenure and honor, will not be as tough. They are serving notice on the administration that they intend to continue to run The Oak Leaf as an independent student newspaper.

And they say Bill Wilber's office owes them $250.

Women at the top

Lori Fisk

©Bill O'Connell, 1982

ASB PRESIDENT Lori Fisk pauses for just a moment in her hectic schedule to flash a smile for the camera. Fisk has been involved with student government since high school and plans to remain active. "I've never even considered a housewife," she laughs.

Hyde Park

Trying to keep up with Lori Fisk, President-elect for fall '82, is like trying to keep up with Wonder Woman. Not only is she faster than a speeding jet and able to leap tall campaign obstacles with a single bound, but she's more than an SRJC administrator. Fisk keeps busy with a full load of units, her part-time job at the book store, and of course, her position as the '82 executive vice president. "My whole life is spent studying, working, and doing things in student government," she her average day for Fisk starts at 8 a.m. and goes helter-skelter until around 4 or 5 p.m., she says, "with not very many breaks. Usually when I get home I do some work and spend a little bit of time with my family."

Fisk wants to keep my grades up so I can transfer," she says. In a rare moment of free time, she is sitting on the lawn at SRJC in the shade, thoughtfully picking weeds from the grass. Fisk plans to transfer to UC in fall 1983.

"I'd like to think I'll be accepted at least to the school, if not to economics. That's [the school's] most demanded major," Fisk explains hopefully. "I'm interested in money management and I figured 'econ' would be an appropriate major for it. I've changed my mind since I've been here. I started out with business administration, and then I just changed to 'econ,'" she laughs.

But for the present, Fisk is concentrating on her time-consuming activities in student government at SRJC. Just how much time she spends on her duties in student government is "really hard to calculate. It involves a lot of things like different committee meetings and a lot of time on my own. Maybe seven hours a week?" she guesses, plucking at the green blades of grass.

Fisk beat Ken Meyers of the SAG party in last month's race for the fall ASB presidency. She reflects on her decision to run, explaining, "it was something I wanted to do. When it was time to hand in the petitions, I couldn't think of anyone who could do a better job, just from the experiences I've had." Fisk was interested in student government in her high school days, holding the offices of representative, class treasurer, and student body president. Last semester at SRJC she was also committees commissioner and this spring served as executive vice president, a position traditionally a stepping stone for the ASB presidency.

"One thing I want to do is improve the publicity for CSA meetings, and get more people to know what's going on [in student government] and get more people interested. Because a lot of things that go on affect the people on this campus," says Fisk.

Another activity Fisk plans to participate in next year as president is public speaking. "I think next semester I'd like to start speaking at Hyde Park maybe once a week, once every two weeks, just so people know what's going on."

As to her goals for her term in office next fall, Fisk has only come up with a few as of yet. "Every year the student body has bought one piece of art [from a student artist] and they've just kept them in storage. So I'd like to set up a display where all the art through the history of SRJC could be seen. I think it'd be interesting," says Fisk.

"We also want to set up a book board," she says, describing how students could trade books with other students to save money. "Somebody gave me the idea of having a party board, just listing all the parties so people know what's going on." Assembling these projects, along with her regularly scheduled presidential duties, will certainly keep Fisk occupied.

"Sometimes I wish I had more time. But I'm kept busy. I'm happy. This semester was too intense. I'll just know better next semester. I'll just not take as many classes," says Fisk, shifting positions on the lawn.

"Anyway, I've left a lot of open time so I can deal with things in student government. I think I like to spend my [free] time with different people because I don't really have any hobbies. I like to attend theatre but I don't really have much time. I don't really have any hobbies just because I don't have any time," she continues.

As for next year, Fisk will be taking 12 units and a light workload at the book store. "Most of my time is going to be devoted to student government. This summer it's going to be the same," concludes Fisk with a sigh.

Sub: District Liability for Associated Students' Funding Students Going Out of State to Participate in Athletic Competition -

Thank you for your note of June 2, 1982 on the Executive Cabinet minutes of May 12, 1982.

I would be happy to discuss this item with you at any time. Mike Puccioni who attended the National Waterski Championships, has already competed and returned.

As you are now aware, two students and a student coach from Adaptive PE are being sent to the National Wheelchair Competition in Marshall, Minnesota on June 23 - 27. A request for funding was made to the Associated Students by Johnny Hassenzahl from Supportive PE in the amount of $500. The Executive Cabinet of the Associated Students has granted those funds in support of the two students Cindy Schweitzer and Georgina Biter, as well as the coach Windi Braden. Additional funds apparently are coming from off campus sources. As you know, Ed Buckley has approved the trip as an official college activity.

The nature of the District liability has never been made clear. Previously, an issue involving Wheelchair Athletes was brought before the Board of Trustees and, essentially, they decided not to make a decision. The off-the-record comment was for us to go ahead and continue funding these activities through the Associated Students, if requested.

If district policy is made concerning this type of activity, I would appreciate having that information. The Associated Students are faced with this type of request on a fairly frequent basis.

Thank you for your assistance.

Subject Memo of Understanding - Handicapped Athletes to the Nationals

It is my understanding that the Handicapped Athletes, through Johnny Hassenzahl, have your approval for this activity. As you may know, the Associated Students are funding the trip in the amount of $500.

Thank you.

SRJC athletes to face the best

NATIONAL WHEELCHAIR GAMES

Marshall, Minn. (population 10,000) isn't generally thought of as your basic vacation paradise, but for two Santa Rosa Junior College students who thoroughly enjoy swimming, it is definitely the place to be later this month.

Marshall will host the National Wheelchair Games, June 23-27, and 20-year-old Georgina Biter and 29-year-old Cindy Schweitzer will be there to compete in the swimming competition.

For Biter, who owns a pair of national records, the trip east may be just the first leg of a journey this summer that could take her to Canada and England.

But first things first.

Biter, whose home town is St. Helena, will compete in six events in the Class 1A division at the national games — the 100-yard backstroke, the 75-yard individual medley, the 25-yard backstroke, the 25-yard butterfly, the 25-yard breaststroke and the 25-yard freestyle. Schweitzer, who lives in Sonoma, will compete in three events in the Class 4 division — the 50-yard breaststroke, the 50-yard freestyle and the 50-yard backstroke.

Both athletes qualified for the nationals with their performances in the Santa Barbara Wheelchair Games last month.

For Biter, the National Games in Minnesota may be a springboard to international competition later this summer. She hopes to be selected to compete in the International Wheelchair Games at Stoke-Mandeville, England in July. Biter's instructor at SRJC, Windi Braden, has already been selected as an assistant coach of the national team that will compete in England.

There's also a good chance Biter will be chosen to compete in the Pan American Wheelchair Games at Nova Scotia, Canada, in August.

Such journeys do not come cheaply. Partial financing has already been provided by the Royal Order of Caritas, a Santa Rosa service organization, but more money is needed. A "Sink or Swim A Lap" fundraiser will be held Friday at the SRJC pool. Potential sponsors are asked to contact Braden at 527-4386 (days) or 584-0241 (evenings).

Sub: Operation & Revenue -- Concession Stand/Haehl Pavilion

In an effort to clarify the questions concerning the operation of the Concession Stand in the Haehl Pavilion, please accept this letter as our Letter of Intent.

The Associated Students expect to receive the revenue generated by the concession stand in the Haehl Pavilion. Unless a bid or proposal procedure is necessary, the concession stand in the Haehl Pavilion will be covered under a contract to Wolcott's Concessions. As you know, under this contractual arrangement the Associated Students receive 20% of the gross sales and if a club works the concession stand, the club receives an additional 20% of the gross sales.

The Associated Students continue to invest over $13,000 annually in the Inter-Collegiate Athletic Programs of the college and the 1982-83 budget of the Associated Students was predicated on the expected increase in concession revenues from the concession stand in the Haehl Pavilion.
